EXPLANATORY NOTE

The present training centers used by national athletes are outdated and not in top conditions. The athletes train day in and day out but despite their efforts, winning in international competitions has always been an uphill battle. The absence of state-of-the-art and scientific facilities to boost their skills and potentials is seen as a major liability.

This bill seeks to mend the situation through the establishment of a sports complex that will serve as the training center for national athletes to be known as National Amateur Sports Training Center.

At present, the Philippine Sports Commission (PSC) established in 1990 by virtue of Republic Act. No. 6487 take full control and administration of all existing sports facilities in the country: 1) Rizal Memorial Sports Complex (RMSC); 2) Philsports Pasig (formerly ULTRA); and 3) Quezon City Velodrome. Of these, the 86-year old RMSC has served as the training and living quarters for national athletes for the longest time.

While RMSC stands as the biggest sports complex in the country and the main facility for the development and promotion of grassroots sports as well as multi-sectoral sporting activities, it is ill-equipped with new technologies for high level sports training considering that its facilities are age-old. Also, with all the pollution (noise and air), unfavorable conditions and distractions, its location at the heart of the City of Manila has ceased to become an ideal environment for the wellbeing of the athletes.

Sports champions are born out of three (3) contributory factors: 1) Training environment that is conducive to psychological and physical preparations; 2) Support system that is holistic and nurturing; and 3) Adequate international exposures where quality of performances are assessed and measures of skills are tested.

Our national athletes deserve the best possible training opportunities so they can excel in international competitions. Our expectations must be coupled with support and action. If we want a brighter future for Philippine sports, we must find ways to improve the competitive edge of our athletes. One major step towards the realization of this goal is through the establishment of a sports training center with the following features: has substantial space to accommodate all sports, located in a thinly populated area so the athletes can focus on the training and be free from distractions, has state-of-the-art training equipment and technologies, and capable of hosting adequate number of dormitories with modern amenities.

The glory of Philippine sports will no longer be a remote idea once this amateur sports training center is established.

In view of the foregoing reasons, approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
