EXPLANATORY NOTE

“Baybayin” refers to all existing and discovered ancient and traditional scripts of the indigenous peoples of the Philippines. It is important to emphasize the continuing tradition of script writing among a few remaining indigenous communities as scripts are connected to language and literature.

Some government offices and agencies, such the National Museum, the Komisyon Sa Wikang Filipino, the National Library, the National Commission for Culture and the Arts, the Record Management and Archive Office, the National Historical Commission of the Philippines, and the Cultural center of the Philippines, have already incorporated Baybayin in their official logos.

All government agencies and offices must take the lead to further promote Filipino culture and traditions, strengthen Filipino identity, and instill the same in everyday life. The logos and seals of government agencies and offices should not only reflect the emblems of their functions and duties but also its pride in Filipino heritage and traditions.

In view of the forgoing, the immediate passage of this measure is earnestly sought.
