EXPLANATORY NOTE

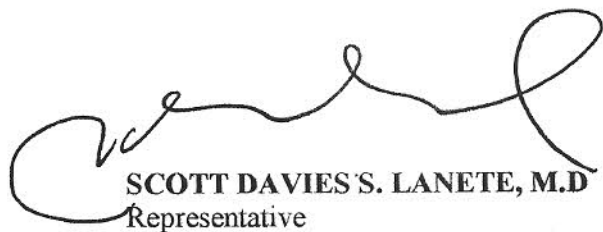

As stated in the 1987 Philippine Constitution, it is the prime duty of the State to protect and promote the right to health of the people and instill health consciousness among them. It is also its solemn mandate to protect and advance the right of the people to a balanced and healthful ecology in accord with the rhythm and harmony of nature.

Devolution of power has been the trademark policy of the State for the past decades. By empowering the local government units, the State's reach in terms of providing services to the people has greatly expanded. This has led to people in the far-flung areas of the country receiving utmost care and attention which has enabled them to participate and contribute to society's development.

However, not everything in the State's policy of devolution has proven effective. Some devolved power have had a worsening effect in terms of delivery of basic services. One of these is basic health care services. Problems on devolved healthcare system persist to this day, despite the mechanisms established by the national and local governments. The non-implementation of the Magna Carta for Health Workers has been a major result of devolution. Local government units have consistently failed, owing to various factors, the provisions of this law which are greatly needed by the healthcare sector. As such, there have been delays and non-payment of healthworkers' salaries and benefits. Also the diminution of funds intended for basic health care services has caused the inefficient, if not non-existent, delivery of services.

As a solution to this predicament, it is essential that the State take a proactive step by establishing a program that would devote utmost attention to the health of Filipinos living both in rural areas. It is imperative that the State adopt a comprehensive and integrated health care delivery system and thereby effectively solve the ills brought about by the ineffectiveness of local governments.

In view of the foregoing, the approval of this bill is earnestly requested.
