HOUSE BILL NO. 0443

Introduced by HONORABLE STRIKE B. REVILLA

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Constitution, Article 16, section 9 states that:

The State shall protect consumers from trade malpractices and from substandard or hazardous products.

A “lemon” is a term used to describe a defective car that is found to have numerous or severe defects not readily apparent before its purchase. Such defect substantially impairs its use, value, or safety. If the car has been repaired four or more times for the same defect within the warranty period and the defect has not been fixed, the car qualifies as a lemon. The United States has several federal and state laws called “lemon laws” to protect consumers. Lemon laws provide a remedy for purchases of cars that repeatedly fail to meet standards of quality and performance.

In the Philippines, the purchase of a new car usually carries a manufacturer’s warranty. On the other hand, vendors of used cars do not usually issue any express warranty. A “used car”, also known as a pre-owned vehicle and second hand car, is a vehicle that has previously had one or more owners. Used cars usually sold through car dealers, leasing companies, auctions and private party sales.

Since brand new cars are still considered prohibitive for the middle class, many resort to purchasing used cars. Unfortunately, without mechanical expertise, buyers cannot easily distinguish which used cars have defects. Vendors are not required to disclose the history of the cars they sell. Thus, many used cars though seemingly in good running condition, could have been improperly maintained or poorly required, been unprofessionally rebuilt after collision or tampered with in some manner to conceal high mileage, mechanical defects, corrosion or other damage. For example, many vendors of cars that have undergone a flood do not disclose such information to their buyers.
This bill seeks to protect consumers who buy vehicles from a dealer or private party. It requires dealers to provide consumers with a written warranty against defects that impair the vehicle’s use or safety, and requires private parties to disclose any known use or safety defects.

Dealer warranties cannot be waived under any circumstances. The dealer must give a signed, dated, correct copy of the limited used vehicle warranty at the time you purchase the vehicle. The warranty requires the dealer to repair any defect that impairs the vehicle’s use or safety. The coverage depends on the mileage of the vehicle at the time of purchase as outlined below:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>

<td>30 days or 2,012 km., whichever comes first</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>201,168 km. or over</td>

Though our country allows private enterprises and individuals to enter into contracts freely, the state should come in when necessary to protect the interests of the consumer, promote his/her general welfare and establish standards of conduct for business and industry.¹
