EXPLANATORY NOTE

The promotion of Filipino culture is an integral part of nation building. National development cannot merely be measured through the qualification of material and economic gains, but in the overall and holistic development of the people in their political, social and cultural life as a nation. The 1987 Philippine Constitution even devotes several provisions on the promotion and preservation of Philippine arts and culture as an indispensable aspect of national development. Sec. 16, Art. XIV, for example. Provides that “The State shall conserve, promote, and popularize the nation’s historical and cultural heritage and resources, as well as artistic creations.”

An important aspect of any national heritage and culture is a nation’s cinema and theater. A “national cinema.” loosely defined, is a country’s body of films that embodies the social and cultural identity of its people. National theater, meanwhile, is a country’s body of theater and plays portraying the social and cultural identity of its people. The film and theater medium have, throughout this century, been an important means of reflecting the life of our nation through various genres that depict the lives of Filipinos. A genuine national policy on the promotion of Filipino cultural heritage cannot therefore exist without the inclusion of Philippine cinema and theater development and appreciation as an integral part thereof.

During these times when economic conditions, like market forces and the cost of production, and the lack of government support have hampered and limited the full development of a truly vibrant Philippine cinema and theater and the preservation of its history, and at a time when our youth are increasingly being bombarded by the influence of foreign films and plays, it becomes more imperative and urgent to introduce our youth to Philippine cinema through series of lectures and an entire subject taught in secondary schools with regard to Filipino films with a focus on its appreciation as a collective body of artistic creations that enhance and reflect the cultural and societal identity of our nation.

In recent memory, national cinema and theater has gained its ground and prominence amongst a wide array of audience members both young and old. This revival in appreciation in cinema and theater has been vibrant, with more performances have openly addressed issues concerning our society, various trials and tribulations faced by various sectors, the hopes and expectations for a brighter future, and especially a genuine interest on our national identity.

In the various pursuit of nationalism and patriotism by both government, non-government, and civil society organizations, cinema and theater has remained an independent, yet powerful body in igniting interest and desires of the people to embody nationalist and patriotic values in their everyday lives. Films such as Jerrold Tarog's Heneral Lune and Goyo: Ang Batang Heneral has aroused public interest of our country’s history against foreign domination. Plays such as Care Divas, Charot! and The Kundiman Party have expounded on prominent social issues through creative and interactive means.

In the same way Philippine literature, through classics such as Noli Me Tangere and El Filibusterismo, among others, is taught in schools as a means of promoting and preserving one aspect of Filipino cultural heritage and history. Philippine cinema and theater should likewise be given the opportunity to be appreciated by our youth, with the hope not only of providing them a picture of our identity and our history as a people, but also with the hope of inspiring them to take advantage of the medium, in its traditional and its digital variations, in order to showcase and express their aspirations as the bearers of our nation’s future.

This bill seeks to institute the mandatory instruction of Philippine cinema and theater appreciation courses formulated by the Department of Education, in consultation with the National Commission for Culture and Arts (NCAA) and the University of the Philippines Film Institute (UPFI), in secondary schools across the country as separate subjects of incorporated in existing subjects now being taught, whichever is more practicable.
Approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
