Republic of the Philippines

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Quezon City, Metro Manila

EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 603

Introduced by HONORABLE RESURRECCION MARRERO-ACOP, MD

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP) was created by virtue of Republic Act 6975 with the mission to prevent and suppress destructive fires, investigate its causes, provide emergency medical and rescue services, and enforce other fire related laws with active involvement of the community.

The BFP is also responsible for the enforcement of the Fire Code of the Philippines (PD 1185) and other related laws. To achieve this, it shall establish at least one (1) fire station with adequate personnel, firefighting facilities and equipment in every provincial capital, city and municipality subject to standard rules and regulations as maybe promulgated. As part of its function to provide emergency medical and rescue services, it must ensure operational readiness of the EMS team on duty.

According to the 2008 Implementing Rules and Regulations (IRR) of the Fire Code of the Philippines, the scope of training for members of fire brigades consist of training on fire suppression, rescue, emergency medical services (EMS) and related emergency response. They shall also be instructed on the handling of available fire rescue apparatus, equipment, devices and tools. The IRR, however, does not impose any standard as to the type and quality of EMS and related emergency response training. Even the issuance of the following guidelines:

1) Department Order No. 92-288 dated 22 July 1992;

2) Memorandum Circular No. 2008-07 – Prescribing Policies and Guidelines on BFP EMS Operations; and have failed to establish adequate standards for the entry-level fireman, Fire Officer 1 (FO1), as Certified First Responders and/or Certified Emergency Medical Technicians.

Since its inception in the 1970s, emergency medical services (EMS) continues to evolve and mature. As is true of most new professions, no "master plan" was conceived to guide its evolution systematically at the outset. The stakeholders of EMS had no way to predict the challenges that would face the profession in its rapid growth period. The diversity of EMS providers (from paid, full-time personnel to volunteers), system design (hospital-based to public safety-based), and local variations of practice have presented unique challenges that do not face other allied health care professions.

In the United States, it took them almost thirty years to come up with a national standard EMS curricula, accreditation standards, and a national registration system, albeit, these individual parts developing independently. Currently, there is no formal EMS education system in which the components are clearly defined, their interrelationships articulated, and the decision-making process for modification and improvement established. The absence of a formal EMS education system has also led to inconsistencies among the various curricula and difficulties in the ability to bridge from one level of education to another. Currently, there is no consistent method of providing input to the national EMS education decision-making process.

While aware of these challenges, this Representation nonetheless believes that mandatory training to qualify our fire officers in EMS and as Certified First Responders will go a long way in capacitating the BFP in achieving its mission in the best possible way.
