EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 642

Introduced by HON. JOY MYRA S. TAMBUNING

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The outbreak of violence during the conduct of evictions and demolitions of our urban and rural poor brethren has not only consistently hogged headlines. It has, unfortunately, led to instances of severe injuries as well as loss of lives. Moreover, the difficulties of coordinating various stakeholders, including various branches and agencies of the government, have led to clashes in jurisdiction. It is not uncommon for us to hear about conflicts between court sheriffs and local chief executives when evictions are set to take place. This shouldn't be the case.

However, while these are sad enough, the trampling of basic human rights on both sides of the fence during these incidents is something that is a cause for much more concern.

Thus, there is a need for a more comprehensive and effective means of coordination there various stakeholders and government agencies – which this measure seeks to address. With the adoption of a Code of Conduct - a handbook of sorts for all concerned persons to follow in instances where evictions and demolitions may be validly carried out, it is our hope that these unfortunate incidents that have become synonymous with demolitions and evictions in the past could be minimized if not totally avoided. This bill, initially filed by my husband Rep. Gus Tambunting during the 16th and 17th Congresses, is once again being filed with sincere hopes that it will be passed into law so that the rights of all concerned may be protected.
