EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Philippine national economy soars and falls on the strength and productivity of its most vital resource — its labor force. Hence, the State has enshrined in the Constitution its duty to provide full protection to labor and to promote the rights of all workers, including their right to paid days off to pursue well-balanced lives.

Existing laws currently entitle every qualified Filipino worker to enjoy distinct types of paid days off or leaves. Some of the basic leaves are service incentive, maternity, paternity, parental, and special ones for abused women or those battling gynecological health issues. While these benefits exemplify legislative efforts to nurture a work environment that upholds the welfare of employees, they are also reflective of traditional Filipino values which reward hard work, recognize the role of women in nation-building, and preserve the sanctity of the family. A close examination of the aforementioned leaves, however, reveals a gaping lack in a legally mandated time off for employees who recently lost a family member. In fact, the discretion to grant employees the space to grieve and recover from the loss lies solely on the employer who may or may not permit the same. This scenario contradicts the State policy to provide employees with humane working conditions that foster their productivity and maintain their dignity.

In light of the foregoing, this bill seeks to decree the mandatory provision of a 10-day bereavement leave with full pay to all employees in the public and private sectors who have recently lost an immediate family member within the third level of consanguinity or affinity. Among others, this bereavement leave is sought to provide employees adequate time to make the necessary wake and/or burial arrangements, as well as to reach out to family members and friends for emotional support during this difficult time. Furthermore, this bill also ensures the non-diminution of benefits and security of tenure to those who avail of this benefit.

In consideration of the foregoing premises, the approval of this bill is humbly sought.
