EXPLANATORY NOTE

In 2014, the Philippines was the 13th most populated country in the world with a population of 107 million\(^1\). During the same year, the Philippines' Global Hunger Index (GHI) was 13.1, significantly higher than the ideal score of less than five\(^2\). This reflected a high incidence of undernourishment, child underweight and child mortality, as the index were gauged by the same.

Our growing population needs a sustainable solution to combat inaccessibility and unavailability of food in the country and achieve food security. In a survey conducted by the National Nutrition Survey (NNS) in 2011, 36% of Filipino adults and 23% of Filipino children claimed to be food insecure\(^3\). There is an apparent need for a more sustainable agriculture practice in the country in order to be self-sustaining in meeting the food needs of every Filipino.

One cause of starvation and malnutrition is unsustainable production methods and loss of bio-diversity on the farm\(^4\). Organic farming as a process sustains the health of soils and ecological balance of the environment\(^5\), guaranteeing a sustainable production for the long-term. This bill intends to strengthen sustainable agriculture by amending the Organic Agriculture Act of 2010 in order to keep up with the development in sustainable farming and fulfill the goal of providing food for every Filipino.

As President Duterte has mentioned previously in his campaign, his administration intends to prioritize tackling food insecurity through the development of the agricultural sector. This bill seeks to compliment this intent through the adoption of organic agricultural system as viable alternative to import-based toxic farming methods. By supporting our farmers, especially the organic and other small farmers, and helping them increase production and productivity, we are also lifting food production and access to food.

As it is becoming widely recognized as an alternative to conventional farming, this bill proposes to implement such practices more aggressively to promote food self-sufficiency as well as encourage farmers in order to increase production.

It is also emphasized that food insecurity is a battle that every citizen must counter. This bill, as a counterpart bill to Senator Poe’s version in the Senate, proposes a nationwide education and awareness campaign among consumers on the benefits of consuming organic products. This bill also ensures decent returns to organic producers by providing marketing assistance. It must be noted that in 2014, the Philippines was 4th in the world in having the largest numbers of organic producers. This bill further ensures methods for proper registration and labeling of organic produce to avoid misleading the consuming public.

This measure would greatly support the propagation of organic farming practices in the country, meet the needs of small organic farmers and encourage other small Filipino farmworkers to shift to organic farming. In addressing the country’s obstacle in achieving food security and food self-sufficiency, it is imperative that we support all sectors involved and aim for development through sustainable and innovative methods.

In light of the foregoing, the approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
