Introducing the Magnalo Party-List Representative

Explanatory Note

Public office is a public trust. The Constitution puts emphasis on promoting and maintaining integrity and honesty in public service, and the repression of acts of public officers and private persons which constitute or lead to graft and corrupt practices. This implies government's responsibility to take positive and effective measures against graft and corruption.

The "Bank Secrecy Deposits Law", otherwise known as Republic Act No. 1405 was enacted in 1955, for purposes of encouraging people to deposit their finances in banking institutions and discourage private holding so that the same may be properly managed and utilized by the financial sector for the growth and development of the country's economic activity.

Under this law, all deposits are absolutely confidential and may not be inquired or looked into except upon permission of the depositor, in cases of impeachment, upon order of a competent court in cases of bribery or delinquency of duty, and in cases where the money deposited or invested is the subject matter of litigation.

However, this provision of the law prohibiting the disclosure of or inquiry to bank deposits had been exploited time and again to hamper and stall investigations of government officials and employees suspected of enriching themselves while in public office.

Hence, this measure seeks to exclude government officials and employees, whether elected or appointed, from the coverage of the Bank Secrecy Law so that law enforcement authorities will be equipped with the tools needed to go after crooks in government.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this measure is earnestly sought.
