EXPLANATORY NOTE

Our Constitution provides that the “State shall afford full protection to labor … and promote full employment and equality of employment opportunities for all.”1 Our Labor Code provides that the State shall do so “regardless of sex, race or creed.”2 Accordingly, Congress has prohibited employment discrimination against women,3 persons with disabilities,4 and based on age5 (although “disability” and “age” are unenumerated), and sexual harassment.6 Yet it has failed to prohibit discrimination against women in hiring and, more glaringly, based on sexual orientation and gender identity and expression. These omissions are unconstitutional and must be corrected. Indeed, Congress must outlaw discrimination at the hiring stage and the workplace based on all irrelevant factors: race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

This bill proposes to harmonize, strengthen, and broaden the scope of existing anti-discrimination laws and establish an Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) to administer and enforce protections against workplace discrimination based on factors other than a person's qualifications and performance. With this special mandate and with powers broader than those exercised by regular prosecutors, the EEOC will ease the workload of prosecutors, hasten the dispensation of justice to aggrieved workers, and positively influence work-related policies and practices of employers. Immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.

ARTICLE II

UNLAWFUL DISCRIMINATORY PRACTICE

Sec. 4. In General. – It is unlawful to discriminate against someone (job applicant or employee) because of that person’s race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression. It is also illegal to retaliate against a person because he or she complained about discrimination, filed a charge of discrimination, or participated in an employment discrimination investigation or lawsuit.

It is unlawful for an employer to use neutral employment policies and practices that have a disproportionately negative effect on job applicants or employees of a particular race, national origin, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression, or on an individual with a disability or class of individuals with disabilities, if the polices or practices at issue are not job-related and necessary to the operation of the business. It is also unlawful for an employer to use neutral employment policies and practices that have a disproportionately negative impact on job applicants or employees based on age, if the policies or practices at issue are not based on a reasonable factor other than age.

Sec. 5. Unlawful Employer Practices. – It is unlawful for an employer:

(a) To refuse to hire, or adopt and implement policies and practices that have the effect of disqualifying or excluding from hiring, any person on account his or her race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression. Accordingly, the following, inter alia, are prohibited:

(1) To print or publish, or cause to be printed or published, in any form of media, including the internet, any notice of advertisement relating to employment suggesting preferences, limitations, specifications, and discrimination based on race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression;

(2) To require a declaration of race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age or birthdate, or sexual orientation during the application process; and

(3) To decline any employment application because of one’s race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

If an employer requires job applicants to take a test, the test must be necessary and related to the job and the employer may not exclude people of a particular race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression. Moreover, the results of the test must be disclosed to the job applicant. In addition, the employer may not use a test that excludes job applicants based on age if the test is not based on a reasonable factor other than age.

If an employer requires job applicants to take a medical test, the test must be administered only after a job offer has been made.

If a job applicant with a disability needs an accommodation (such as a sign language interpreter) to apply for a job, the employer is required to provide the accommodation, so long as the accommodation does not cause the employer significant difficulty or expense.

(b) To recruit new employees in a way that discriminates against them because of their race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

(c) To discriminate against an employee with respect to his or her compensation, benefits, fringe benefits, incentives or allowances, or the terms and conditions or privileges of employment, including but not limited to training opportunities and study and scholarship grants, because of the employee's race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

(d) To make decisions about job assignments and promotions based on an employee's race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

If an employer requires employees to take a test before making decisions about assignments or promotions, the test may not exclude people of a particular race, national origin, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression, or individuals with disabilities, unless the employer can show that the test is necessary and related to the job. In addition, the employer may not use a test that excludes employees based on age if the test is not based on a reasonable factor other than age. The employer will disclose test results to employees.

(e) To discipline, discharge, forcibly lay off, or impose early retirement on, an employee based on the employee's race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression. This prohibition applies to constructive discharge or forcing an employee to resign by making the work environment so intolerable a reasonable person would not be able to stay.

Employers may not discriminate when deciding which workers to recall after a layoff.

(f) To give a negative or false employment reference (or refuse to give a reference) because of a person's race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

(g) To harass an employee because of race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression, or to harass someone because he or she has complained about discrimination, filed a charge of discrimination, or participated in an employment discrimination investigation or lawsuit.

Harassment is illegal if it is so frequent or severe that it creates a hostile or offensive work environment or if it results in an adverse employment decision (such as the victim being fired or demoted).
In a work-related or employment environment, sexual harassment is committed when: (1) sexual favor is made as a condition in the hiring or in the employment, re-employment or continued employment of an individual, or in granting said individual favorable compensation, terms, conditions, promotions, or privileges; or the refusal to grant the sexual favor results in limiting, segregating or classifying the employee which in any way would discriminate, deprive or diminish employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect said employee; (2) The above acts would impair the employee’s rights or privileges under existing labor laws; or (3) The above acts would result in an intimidating, hostile, or offensive environment for the employee.

Sec. 6. Unlawful Job Contractor Practices. – It is unlawful for a job contractor to fail or refuse to refer for employment, or otherwise to discriminate against, any individual because of his or her race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

It is also unlawful to classify or refer for employment any individual on the basis of his or her race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

Sec. 7. Unlawful Labor Organization Practices. – It is unlawful for a labor organization:

(a) To deny membership based on race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression;

(b) To exclude from membership based on race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression;

(c) To limit, segregate or classify its membership or applicants for membership, or to classify or fail or refuse to refer for employment any individual, in any way that would deprive or tend to deprive any individual of employment opportunities, or would limit such employment opportunities or otherwise adversely affect his status as an employee or as an applicant for employment, because of such individual’s race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression; or

(d) To cause or attempt to cause an employer to discriminate against an individual in violation of this Act.

Sec. 8. Training Programs. – It is unlawful discriminatory practice for any employer, labor organization or those organizations with apprenticeship or learnership programs, including on-the-job training programs to discriminate against any individual because of his or her race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

Sec. 9. Exceptions. – Notwithstanding any other provision of this article, it is not unlawful for an employer to apply different standards of compensation or different terms, conditions, or privileges of employment pursuant to bona fide seniority or merit system, or system which measures earnings by quantity or quality of production or to employees who work in different locations; provided, such differences are not the result of an intention to discriminate because of race, national origin, color, religion, disability, age, physical characteristics, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, and gender identity and expression.

Further, it is not unlawful for an employer to give and to act upon the results of any professionally developed ability test provided that such test, its administration or action upon the results is not designated, intended or used to discriminate because of race, color, religion, disability, sex (including pregnancy), sexual orientation, gender identity and expression, or national origin.

A policy or practice implemented by an employer, job contractor, or labor organization pursuant to an opinion of the Commission shall not be actionable.

Sec. 10. Burden of Proof. – The complaining party bears the burden of proving that the respondent discriminated based on his or her membership in a protected group. The complaining party must make a prima facie showing of discrimination. The respondent must then articulate and establish a nondiscriminatory reason for its practice. The complaining party must then prove that the stated reason is a pretext to hide discrimination.

A complaining party alleging that a particular practice neutral on its face has a disparate impact on a protected group must prove that the challenged practice has a substantial adverse impact on the protected group. The respondent must then prove that the challenged practice is job-related for the position in question and consistent with business necessity. Even if the respondent proves business necessity, the complaining party may still prevail by showing that the respondent has refused to adopt an alternative practice that would satisfy the respondent's legitimate interests without having a disparate impact on the protected class.

Sec. 11. Penalties for Violations. – Any person liable for committing an unlawful discriminatory practice shall suffer:

(a) For the first offense, imprisonment of not less than three (3) months but not more than six (6) months or a fine of not less than Two Hundred Thousand Pesos
(Php200,000.00) but not more than Four Hundred Thousand Pesos (Php400,000.00), or both;
(b) For the second offense, imprisonment of not less than six (6) months but not more than one (1) year or a fine of not less than Four Hundred Thousand Pesos (Php400,000.00) but not more than Six Hundred Thousand Pesos (Php600,000.00), or both; or
(c) For the third offense, imprisonment of not less than one (1) year but not more than three (3) years or a fine of not less than Six Hundred Thousand Pesos (Php600,000.00) but not more than One Million Pesos (Php1,000,000.00), or both, with penalty of closure in all instances.
If the violator is a corporation, organization or any similar entity, the officials thereof directly involved shall be liable therefor.
If the violator is an alien or a foreigner, he shall be deported immediately after service of sentence without further deportation proceedings.

SEC. 12. Independent Action for Damages. – Nothing in this Act shall preclude the victim of unlawful discriminatory practice from instituting a separate and independent action for damages and other affirmative relief in the proper forum.
