Republic of the Philippines
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 2086

Introduced by Representative Junie E. Cua

This bill covers the fourth package of the Duterte Administration’s comprehensive tax reform program. It complements the Tax Reform for Acceleration and Inclusion Act (R.A. No. 10963) by making capital income taxes and financial intermediary taxes simpler, fairer, and more efficient.

With the sizable contribution of the financial sector to the economy and the crucial role it plays in financing large-scale investments, including the Build, Build, Build (BBB) program, there are many compelling reasons to undertake a comprehensive tax reform in this sector given several deficiencies:

a. Complicated tax structure – The taxation of capital income and financial services has become overly complex. Based on the current tax system, there are 80 tax base and tax rate combinations applicable to financial income, financial intermediation services, and financial transactions. Tax on income also depends on many factors and conditions which are difficult to ascertain. Factors that affect the taxation of income include the type of product, type of lending, issuer, currency, maturity, taxpayer, residency, business status, and various special laws. All of these result on variations in the tax base and tax rate, even among comparable financial instruments and transactions.

b. Susceptibility to arbitrage – The variations in tax rates and unequal tax treatment of equivalent or comparable financial instruments give rise to arbitrage. Different tax treatment among sectors, or between financial institutions and non-financial institutions offering the same service and/or product, or between interests and dividends, open window for arbitrage and leveraging. These disparities in tax treatment distort investment decisions considering that tax impositions overshadow all other considerations. Competitive advantage arises in favor of the financial sector favored by the law’s tax treatment.

c. Uneven playing field – The current tax system provides certain concessions or different tax treatments of certain transactions for some types of financial institutions (FIs) compared to similar transactions of other FIs. For instance, there are exemptions allowed on long-term investments, bank deposits, individual trust funds, and investment management accounts in favor of resident individuals. Such exemptions do not cover long-term savings offered by other FIs, such as life insurance, pre-need/pension plans, investment houses, among others.

Also, classifications between different FIs cause unequal treatment, considering that some are subject to gross receipts tax (GRT), while some are subject to premium tax, while others are subject to the value-added tax (VAT). For instance, banks, quasi-banks, and other FIs are subject to GRT, while life insurance companies are subject to premium tax, and lending investors, property insurers, pre-need companies, health maintenance organizations (HMOs), and money remitters are subject to VAT.

d. Inequitable distribution of tax burden – Investments in equity and some forms of long-terms instruments are subject to lower tax rates. Hence, those who have more money to place in these kinds of investment tend to pay lower taxes compared to working class individuals who are content with placing their funds in short-term investments or savings deposit with higher taxes.

e. Uncompetitive tax system – A comparison of taxes on capital income in ASEAN nations shows that Philippine tax on capital income remains the highest in the region. Considering this, the Philippine capital market remains shallow and uncompetitive, and continues to lag behind ASEAN neighbors.

f. High administrative and compliance cost – The complicated structure of the current tax system makes administration and compliance difficult and costly. For instance, firms have to pay different taxes that are derived from the same tax base.

g. Not supportive of capital market development – There are a number of taxes on financial transactions that hinder capital market development. Initial public offering (IPO) tax, for instance, is essentially a tax on capital, and does not take into consideration income generation. Such an imposition serves as a deterrent to public listing. This results in the Philippine Stock Exchange (PSE) lagging behind other ASEAN countries in terms of market capitalization.

The inclusion of the capital income and financial services in the current administration’s comprehensive tax reform program provides a window of opportunity to achieve the much-needed reform in the financial sector. The taxation of the financial system should indeed be viewed as a major component of these reforms, an ingredient that could fuel and direct the movement of capital rightly to where they are most needed, so that higher, sustainable, and more inclusive growth can be achieved.

And so, this bill seeks to reform the taxation of capital income and financial services in the country, by redesigning the financial sector taxation into a simpler, fairer, more efficient, and a revenue neutral tax system. This bill aims to achieve the following objectives:

a. Provide neutrality in the tax treatment across financial institutions and financial instruments.

b. Simplify what has become a complex tax system.

c. Improve equity across investors and savers.

d. Minimize arbitrage opportunities.

e. Promote capital market development and tax competitiveness within the context of financial globalization, increased capital mobility, and financial inclusion.

To achieve these, this bill proposes the following reforms:

a. Reduction in the number of rates of withholding taxes - Due to the difficulties posed by various tax rates on interest income, distinctions are removed, such that a more uniform tax treatment is imposed on interest income regardless of currency, maturity, issuer, and other differentiating factors. Likewise, special rates and exemptions are removed.

b. Unification of tax rates for interests, dividends, and capital gains - Considering the complicated tax system on capital income, a more unified rate of tax is imposed for interests, dividends, and capital gains.
c. Harmonization of business taxes - A single GRT rate for all FIs, excluding premium tax on insurance, is imposed. For further harmonization of taxes, distinction between lending and non-lending activities, as well as the term of maturity of an instrument, is removed. A single rate of 5% is imposed.

Pre-need, pension, life, and HMO insurance are all taxed similarly at a 2% premium tax rate. Meanwhile, non-life insurance is subject to 12% value-added tax.

d. Removal or minimization of barriers to capital market development - IPO tax, which is found to be detrimental to capital market development is removed.

Overall, the DST of the financial sector is being rationalized to promote capital mobility.

e. Adoption of a regionally competitive tax system - Considering that Philippine taxes on capital income is the highest in the ASEAN region, measures are taken towards the adoption of tax rates comparable to those of neighboring ASEAN nations and their best practices. With the reform, the proposed rates would be at par with the rates imposed in ASEAN to ensure competitiveness of the domestic capital market.

Financial sector taxation is indeed ripe for reform. The approval of this bill is earnestly sought so we can compete better in attracting capital and investment, which is urgently needed to finance infrastructure, create more and better jobs, and boost the inclusive and sustainable growth of the economy.

SEC. 2. Declaration of Policy. – The financial sector plays a significant role in the long-term growth of the national economy. A key policy markets, and the products and transactions that come with them, is an essential element in developing the capital market. Towards this end, the regionally more competitive tax system for passive income and financial intermediation to encourage savings and develop as well as deepen the capital markets. Accordingly, the State adopts the following policies:

1. The State shall promote and develop a tax system that provides neutrality in the tax treatment across financial institutions and financial instruments.

2. The State shall endeavor to simplify an otherwise complex tax system for easy compliance.

3. The State shall ensure that the taxation of passive income and financial transactions is equitable across all stakeholders and discourages arbitrage opportunities.
