EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

House Bill No. 2144

Introduced by Rep. LAWRENCE LEMUEL H. FORTUN

EXPLANATORY NOTE

It is a declared policy of the State to promote, protect and uphold human rights. Article XIII Section 1 states:

"The Congress shall give highest priority to the enactment of measures that protect and enhance the right of all the people to human dignity, reduce social, economic, and political inequalities, and remove cultural inequalities by equitably diffusing wealth and political power for the common good."

Pursuant to this state policy, Section 17 of the same article provided for the creation of an independent office known as the Commission on Human Rights with the power, among others, to investigate human rights violations involving civil and political rights, provide appropriate legal measures for the protection of human rights, exercise visitatorial rights over jails and detention facilities, implement a continuing program of research, education, and information to enhance respect for the primacy of human rights, recommend to Congress effective measures to promote human rights and to provide for compensation to victims of violations of human rights, or their families, monitor the Philippine Government’s compliance with international treaty obligations on human rights, grant immunity from prosecution to any person whose testimony or whose possession of documents or other evidence is necessary or convenient to determine the truth in any investigation conducted by it or under its authority, and request the assistance of any department, bureau, office, or agency in the performance of its functions.

While the Commission has been instrumental to the protection of human rights in the country, its efforts, consistent with its current mandate, have been devoted to civil and political rights. Other forms of deprivation or violation of the right to human dignity such as poverty, various forms of discrimination, and social exclusion have not been the focus of the Commission. Even in the pursuance of civil and political rights, the Commission is handicapped by such limitations as lack of prosecutorial powers, lack of power to issue immediate relief measures for human rights violations, and real fiscal autonomy that should ensure its independence as a constitutional commission.

This bill seeks to strengthen the Commission on Human Rights by expanding its mandate to cover economic, social and cultural rights to be more in keeping with Article XIII Section 1 of the Constitution, granting it the power to issue temporary relief measures, residual prosecutorial powers, fiscal autonomy, and strengthen its structural organization. The bill aims to ensure that the Commission, created under the Constitution pursuant to a declared state policy, is able to fully perform its mandate to ensure the dignity of every human person and guarantee full respect for human rights.

In view of the foregoing, the approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
