House Bill No. 3036

Introduced by Representatives John Marvin "Yul Servo" C. Nieto, Edward Vera Perez Maceda, Dale "Along" R. Malapitan, Eric M. Martinez, and Rolando M. Valeriano

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Republic Act 10351, popularly known as the Sin Tax Law, was enacted as a good governance measure primarily designed to spur positive impact on both fiscal and public health policies of the country. It corrected the long-standing weaknesses of the tobacco and alcohol excise tax system and increased the rates with the intent of lowering the demand for tobacco and alcohol products. It also raised much needed revenues to fund the Universal Health Care (UHC) program of the government.

The Sin Tax Law has proven to be an unqualified success in terms of generating revenue. Based on the Bureau of Internal Revenue’s (BIR) data, the five-year average excise tax collection on sin products prior to the implementation of the Sin Tax Law was pegged at 50.29 Billion Pesos. However, from the start of its implementation in 2013 until 2017, the average doubled to a whopping 134.81 Billion Pesos. In particular, average excise tax collection from tobacco products jacked up from 28.49 Billion Pesos to 89.30 Billion Pesos and an increase from 21.81 Billion Pesos to 45.51 Billion Pesos from alcohol products.

Since its implementation in 2013, the government collected 323.61 Billion Pesos in incremental revenues (Table 1). This resulted in an unprecedented increase in the budget of the Department of Health (DOH) as the incremental revenues derived from RA 10351 were largely allocated for UHC and health infrastructure programs. The DOH budget almost tripled from P53.23 Billion in 2013 to P148.5 Billion in 2017, or a growth of 179% (Table 2).

As mandated by RA 10351, a large amount of the incremental revenues earmarked for health remains allocated for premium subsidies for the health insurance of indigents and senior citizens not covered by the National Health Insurance Program. As a result, PhilHealth almost tripled the coverage of the poor families from 5.2 Million in 2013 to 14.3 Million by the end of 2017. With the expansion of the coverage, the indigent sector, composed of the members and their dependents, now constitutes 33.03% of the 96.97 Million Filipino beneficiaries of PhilHealth.

While much has been accomplished through the Sin Tax Law, there is still room to improve this measure in order to generate more revenues and discourage unhealthy lifestyles, especially alcohol consumption.

According to the Global Burden of Diseases 2016 study on alcohol collaborators, alcohol use is a leading risk factor for global disease burden and causes substantial health loss. The health risks associated with alcohol consumption are cancer, heart disease, diabetes, and cirrhosis – which is one of the top three burdens of the population. Ultimately, the study revealed that even “moderate” alcohol consumption does not protect people from diseases. It argued that alcohol use, regardless of amount, is detrimental to health, and that the risk of all-cause mortality, and of cancers specifically, rises with increasing levels of consumption, and the level of consumption that minimizes health loss is zero. It therefore suggests the need for the revision of alcohol control policies worldwide and to refocus efforts to lower overall population-level consumption.

Moreover, alcohol drinking tends to result in behaviors like drunk-driving and domestic violence. Based on the Online National Electronic Injury Surveillance System of the Department of Health, there were 2,048 vehicular accidents due to alcohol intoxication or 9.3% of the 22,089 transport or vehicular crash-related injury cases in 2015. This increased from 1,295 alcohol-related accidents in 2013 and 1,272 alcohol-related accidents in 2014. It must also be noted that for the four quarters of 2015, vehicular accidents due to alcohol intoxication remained as the top reported risk factor.

5 Disease burden is the impact of a health problem as measured by financial cost, mortality, morbidity, or other indicators. It is often quantified in terms of quality-adjusted life years (QALYs) or disability-adjusted life years (DALYs), both of which quantify the number of years lost due to disease (YLDs).
According to the 2018 National Tax Research Center Review of Excise Taxation of Sin Products, RA 10351 was only successful in lowering the demand of wines and fermented liquors during the first 2-3 years of implementation. However, during its 4th-5th year (2016-2017), an increase in the demand of alcohol was apparent. At the same time, while there was a decrease in demand for wines and fermented liquors, the demand for distilled spirits during the same time frame was generally on an uptrend. The NTRC therefore suggests that the higher taxes imposed on alcohol was ineffective in curbing alcohol consumption and as such, there is a need to increase taxation on such in order to lower its consumption.

Meanwhile, consistent with the aforementioned NTRC review, the Food and Nutrition Research Institute (FNRI) 2015 Clinical and Health Survey revealed that for the years 2013-2015, there was a significant decrease in the number of alcohol drinkers among adolescents aged 10-19 years old and adults aged 20 years and over. However, despite such decrease for the age group 20 years old and above, FNRI data shows that the percentage of alcohol drinkers in 2015 was still significantly higher than that of the baseline year 2008 (Figure 1).

Moreover, the study revealed that an average of five out of 10 (50%) of the adults surveyed were engaged in binge drinking (Figure 2), a behavior that could lead to a myriad of health problems such as cardiovascular and liver diseases, neurological damage, poor control of diabetes, unintentional and intentional injuries, alcohol poisoning, and sexual dysfunction (Center for Disease Control and Prevention, 2017). Moreover, an alarming fact that the FNRI found is that even though the legal age for drinking alcoholic beverages in the Philippines is 18 years old, three in ten (27.0%) of adolescents aged 16-17 years were found to already have consumed alcoholic beverages.

6 Demand growth rates are based on volume of removals of alcohol, or the transfer from factory to warehouse, as per BIR data in NTRC Excise Tax Study.

A factor that may have contributed to the relapse of alcohol consumption is that it remains to be affordable. The Action for Economic Reforms (AEF) contends that the increase in minimum wage during the years succeeding the implementation of Sin Tax Law offsets the increase in alcohol prices, making them still affordable to the public. These are clear manifestations of the excise tax scheme’s failure to deter the consumption of alcohol.

Given alcohol’s harmful health effects, socially-detritmental externalities, and the apparent uptrend in demand despite higher taxes; there is an indisputable need to review and recalibrate the Sin Tax Law, particularly on its provisions on the excise tax on alcohol products.

This bill seeks to increase the excise tax rates on alcohol products and the indexation rate to 10% to account for inflation and income. It likewise seeks to remove the distinction on whether fermented liquors are brewed and sold in microbreweries and pubs or in factories for simpler administration.

The excise tax imposed on tobacco, which is also a “sin” product, has already increased through the TRAIN Law (Republic Act 10963), with the same aim of decreasing the consumption of such products. This representation believes that the upward adjustment on the alcohol excise tax rates contained in this bill will also be an effective measure to curb alcohol consumption. At the same time, the incremental revenues it will generate will also boost the government’s budget for its Universal Health Care program.

As such, it is high time that we, as legislators, take urgent and proper action. Thus, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
