EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article II, Section 12 of the 1987 Constitution declares that the State recognizes the sanctity of family life and shall protect and strengthen the family as a basic social institution, and that the natural and primary right and duty of parents in the rearing of the youth for civic efficiency and the development of moral character shall receive the support of the Government.

The loss of parental care and the severance of maternal bond because of incarceration have long-term debilitating effects for the affected children, their mothers and their families. Research indicates that children with incarcerated mothers and the mothers themselves are at heightened risk for attachment disturbance leading to depression, anxiety, and other trauma-related stress resulting to a diminished quality of their lives. Fortunately, studies also suggest that the quality of the family and social support systems to the child plays a significant role in the child's ability to overcome these challenges and succeed in life. Therefore, it is critical that prison authorities and correctional practitioners, child welfare agencies, and courts of law, understand the unique dynamics of the families involved to ensure a safety net for the children and mothers concerned.
In particular, government policies on prison and jail management, including the courts' rules and procedures, must focus on the unique relationship of a mother to a child, recognize the rights of detained and incarcerated mothers, and the need for special care and consideration of children of incarcerated mothers.

This bill seeks to establish programs and projects for the delivery of health and social packages for incarcerated mothers and their children, child-friendly visitation programs, and for the proper placement of affected children, all for the purpose of mitigating the adverse effects of separation of incarcerated mothers and their children.

For the foregoing reasons, the immediate approval of the proposed measure is earnestly sought.
