EXPLANATORY NOTE

Barangay is defined as the basic administrative division in our country. It has also been described to be the primary planning and implementing unit of government policies and programs. And, at the heart of this planning and implementation lies the significant role of barangay officials who are instrumental in directly delivering public service in the community.

Under Republic Act No. 8291, otherwise known as The Government Service Insurance System (GSIS) Act of 1997, membership in the GSIS shall be compulsory for all employees receiving compensation. However, it does not automatically include barangay officials as its members merely because Section 393 of the Local Government Code only provided that barangay officials shall only receive honoraria – not compensation.

While the creation of GSIS is anchored in promoting the efficiency and welfare of the government employees through social security and financial benefits, its amendment is earnestly needed to show that the Government gives due recognition to barangay officials for their contribution to a public service.

This bill seeks to amend R.A. 8291 by including barangay officials in the compulsory membership of the GSIS in recognition of their years of service and dedication to promote the welfare of the barangay and its residents. Through this compulsory membership, barangay officials, just like any other government employee, can now also be entitled to an array of social security benefits, such as life insurance benefits, separation or retirement benefits, and disability benefits under the law.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this measure is earnestly sought.
