EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 3371

Introduced by Representative Sharon S. Garin

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Philippines is still a primarily agricultural country, with around 39.8% of the entire country’s labor force employed in any of the four (4) agricultural sub-sectors, namely farming, fisheries, livestock and forestry, and the sector contributing around 20% of the Gross Domestic Product (GDP).

With the great contribution of agriculture to our nation’s development, it is only proper that the government give prime importance to projects and programs that support this sector. And support it has, as evidenced by the countless programs coursed through the Department of Agriculture and other related agencies. Some of these support go directly to the farmers, in the form of social and financial aid, and others are for the development of the industry, to create a more efficient and profitable agriculture sector.

But whatever assistance the government provides, it shall be for naught if these services are not properly delivered to the intended beneficiaries. At the forefront of these services are the local city/municipal/provincial agricultural development workers that provide a bridge between farmers and the government. Recent trends however, show that most of these local positions are left vacant by LGUs in an effort to save money which result in a less efficient delivery of agricultural support.

This bill seeks to strengthen the rights of agricultural development workers, giving them additional benefits in terms of compensation, proper working hours, and other various incentives and rewards. These positions include the following: Agricultural Technicians, Agriculturists, Aquaculturists, Nutritionists, Agricultural Engineers, Agricultural Technologists, Fisheries Officers in the city, municipal and provincial levels.

A better and more efficient delivery of government assistance would lead to a more vibrant agricultural sector.

In view of the foregoing, the passage of this bill is earnestly requested.
