Republic of the Philippines
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Constitution Hills, Quezon City

EIGHTEENTH CONGRESS
First Regular Session
4328
House Bill No.____

Introduced by: REPRESENTATIVE ERIC L. OLIVAREZ

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Based on the 2015 Family Income and Expenditure Survey of the Philippine Statistics Office, 87.2% of the population has access to water from formal providers but only 43.6% have piped connection, 11.2% use communal faucets, and the remaining 45.2% rely on point sources. The remaining 12.8% of the population use various means of getting water including fetching water from rivers, digging shallow wells or buying vended water. On wastewater treatment services, coverage is dismal. Roughly 4% of the population is connected to sewerage systems. It is only in Metro Manila where the service providers, in this case private concessionaires, have a program for septage management services and future plans to put in place improved wastewater treatment collection and treatment services. The inadequate safe water and wastewater services result to significant economic losses, attributed to health costs, and losses from tourism and fisheries industries. Diarrhea, the most significant waterborne disease yet easily preventable, remains as one of the leading causes of morbidity and mortality in the Philippines.

The problem is not in access alone. The water supply level of service (i.e., from point sources or communal faucets to piped connection) and quality of service (e.g. achieving 24/7 supply, adequate pressure and drinking water quality) have to be improved considerably also.

While there are many facets to the problem, poor economic regulation has been identified as a critical structural weakness in the sector. Because of the lack or poor enforcement of economic regulations, water utilities are not compelled to expand coverage or improve quality of service; tariffs are not set rationally; operations are inefficient; and few service providers are financially viable. The inability of the formal service providers to expand coverage encouraged "work-around" solutions eventually aggravated the problem including the spawning of many small scale water service providers. Based on the nationwide registry of water service providers¹, there is an estimated 23,603 water service providers from 1,451 municipalities and cities in the Philippines - 90% of which have connections of less than 5,000. Hence, by and large, there are no economies of scale resulting to inefficiencies and inherent limitations for growth.

In the Philippine context poor economic regulation is a result of fragmentation. There are several agencies doing economic regulation (e.g., LWUA, MWSS, LGUs, NWRB, TIEZA). Apart from NWRB, regulators have conflicts of interest in their dual role as financier, as in the case of LWUA, or as direct service providers, as in the case of municipal or city governments, thus, effectively practicing self-regulation.

This Bill intends to address the issue of fragmentation through the rationalization of the economic and administrative regulation of water utilities through an independent quasi-judicial body called the Water Regulatory Commission. Among its functions will be to enforce service coverage and quality of performance targets, toward the objective of providing every Filipino safe water supply and adequate wastewater services.
