Barangay Health Workers (BHWs) are defined by the Department of Health (DOH) as persons who have undergone training programs under any accredited government and non-government organization and who voluntarily renders primary health care services in the community after having been accredited to function as such by the local health board in accordance with the guidelines promulgated by the DOH.

At present, there are around 208,000 Barangay Health Workers (BHWs) in the Philippines. This number is too low considering that the Department of Health Bureau of Local Health Development acknowledges that 802,422 BHWs are still needed.

One possible reason why there is very low interest in being a BHW is the fact that they do not have security of tenure under the law.

This bill seeks to strengthen and improve BHWs' incentives by affording them security of tenure after their accreditation as BHWs and granting them second grade civil service eligibility after two years of satisfactory service.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate approval of this measure is earnestly requested.
