House Bill No. 4598

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The importance of the Barangay as a political unit should not be ignored. To be able to deliver basic services to the people efficiently, the Barangay should be empowered and enabled to stand on its own. To promote the general welfare of the Barangay residents, necessary facilities like safe and drinkable water, health centers, educational centers and schools, barangay halls, and means for public commuting should be in place.

In the same vein, the Barangay officials should not be taken for granted. Being closest to the people, they serve as the primary source for planning government policies, programs, projects, and activities for the community. As primary implementors of such policies, projects, programs and activities, Barangay officials are the ones mainly responsible for the successful enforcement of laws, executive orders, and local and barangay ordinances, and delivery of basic services within the Barangay, in many areas of concern such as peace and order, health, environment, traffic management, waste management, and many more.

By the nature of their work, the safety and security of the Barangay officials are always at risk. One glaring example for this is in the fight against drugs. It is the Barangay officials who have the list of actual or possible drug peddlers and users in the community. Complaints against those involved in drugs are more often than not lodged with them before the complainants go to the police. It is these Barangay officials who are the first in line when it comes to receiving reports of crimes that are being committed or have just been committed. When an offender is later on charged with a crime with police authorities and brought to courts of justice, Barangay officials are called to testify against these offenders. And being residents of the same village, their addresses are known by, and their spouses and their families are exposed to, these criminal elements, making them vulnerable to any attack or acts of vengeance. Needless to say, there is this constant fear for their lives and those of their loved ones. On top of that, those who are unhappy with the way they handle neighborhood, family and marital squabbles include them as respondents in cases they file against each other for which reason many Barangay officials are forced to pay from their own pockets the services of lawyers and other litigation expenses in order to successfully exonerate themselves.
Shelling out their personal money is nothing new to Barangay officials. Due to their close proximity to their constituents, they are barraged daily with countless solicitations to cover sports tournaments, beauty pageants, contests and other events like weddings and fiestas, and requests for financial assistance for illnesses, accidents, injuries, hospitalizations, burials, transportation, food, and the like. During calamities, they are the first to address the needs of their constituents. Accepting invitations and attending all kinds of occasions is a must.

Sadly though, in spite of all the services that they render with the accompanying danger to themselves and their family members, Barangay officials are a sorely neglected lot. The benefits that they currently receive from the government are not commensurate to what is due them.

Hence, this bill entitled AN ACT TO ESTABLISH THE MAGNA CARTA FOR BARANGAYS.

In view of the foregoing, a speedy approval of this Bill is earnestly sought.
