AN ACT
REORGANIZING THE OFFICES OF THE COMMISSION ON ELECTIONS

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The Commission on Elections (COMELEC) was created by the Constitution to enforce and administer all laws and promulgate policies, rules and regulations relative to the conduct of an election, plebiscite, initiative, referendum, and recall (Article IX, 1987 Philippine Constitution). To fulfill its mandate, the COMELEC delegates its powers and functions or directs the implementation or enforcement of its orders, rulings, or decisions through the heads of its field offices.¹

The field personnel of the COMELEC is composed of Regional Election Offices, headed by the Regional Election Directors (RED) and assisted by the Assistant Regional Directors. Within a region, there are Provincial Election Offices, headed by the Provincial Election Supervisors (PES). Each municipality or city in a province, is headed by an Election Officer (EO) (B.P. 881).²

Peculiar to the National Capital Region (NCR) is the absence of a Provincial Election Supervisor position. Consequently, the EOs directly report to the RED (Section 53, B.P. 881). The rank of an EO varies depending on the class of the municipality or city and on the number of registered voters within the EO’s area of jurisdiction. In addition, the Omnibus Election Code provides that only members of the Philippine Bar can be appointed as EO in cities especially in the NCR (Section 54, B.P. 881).³

The salary regime of COMELEC employees is based on a 1982 issuance. While the other constitutional bodies regularly readjust the salary schemes of their employees to make them adaptable to the ever increasing cost of living, COMELEC employees to date wallow in misery over the measly sum that they take home resulting from the meager appropriation that is set aside for their salaries and wages. This fact puts COMELEC employees at a disadvantage vis-à-vis their counterparts in the executive department.

It is ironic that the COMELEC, a constitutional body that is tasked to take charge of one of the tenets of our democratic processes, suffers from the seeming lack of equal protection as the principle of “equal pay for equal work” is not felt by its employees.

In the light of this, it is imperative to revisit and reclassify the position and/or salary of COMELEC employees. Premised on a number of factors, this bill posits a timely reclassification COMELEC employees.

Immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
