Republic of the Philippines
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Quezon City

EIGHTEENTH (18th) CONGRESS
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 5279

Introduced by REP. JOSE CHRISTOPHER Y. BELMONTE

EXPLANATORY NOTE

First filed in the 16th Congress by Reps. Ibarra “Barry” Gutierrez, Walden Bello, Arlene “Kaka” Bag-ao, and by this Representation, this measure is the substitute bill approved by the Committee on Human Rights during the 3rd Regular Session of the 16th Congress. In the 17th Congress, the same measure with House Bill No. 7193 was approved in the 3rd Reading and transmitted to the Senate for appropriate action.

This bill aims to provide a comprehensive framework embodying the people’s right to adequate food. Provisions of the 1987 Philippine Constitution, particularly in Article II (Declaration of Principles and State Policies) which state:

“Section 9. The State shall promote a just and dynamic social order that will ensure the prosperity and independence of the nation and free the people from poverty through policies that provide adequate social services, promote full employment, a rising standard of living, and an improved quality of life for all.”

“Section 11. The State values the dignity of every human person and guarantees full respect for human rights.”

“Section 21. The State shall promote comprehensive rural development and agrarian reform.”

make it a State policy, and gives the State the corresponding obligation, to guarantee the fulfillment of the peoples’ right to adequate food. The same obligation was voluntarily adopted by the Philippines as State-Party to the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights which, in its Article 11, provides:
“Article 11. (1) The States Parties to the present Covenant recognize the right of everyone to an adequate standard of living for himself and his family, including adequate food, clothing and housing, and to the continuous improvement of living conditions. The States Parties will take appropriate steps to ensure the realization of this right, recognizing to this effect the essential importance of international cooperation based on free consent. (2) The State Parties to the present Covenant, recognizing the fundamental right of everyone to be free from hunger, shall take, individually and through international cooperation, measures, including specific programmes, which are needed: (a) to improve methods of production, conservation and distribution of food by making full use of technical and scientific knowledge, by disseminating knowledge of principles of nutrition and by developing or reforming agrarian systems in such a way as to achieve the most efficient development and utilization of natural resources; (b) Taking into account the problems of both food-importing and food-exporting countries, to ensure an equitable distribution of world food supplies in relation to need.”

Indeed, a number of international instruments signed by the Philippines, including the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, and numerous pieces of local legislation like Republic Act No. 9700 (Comprehensive Agrarian Reform Program Extension with Reforms which adopted the policies in Republic Act No. 6657), Republic Act No. 8435 (Agriculture and Fisheries Modernization Act), Republic Act No. 8550 (Philippine Fisheries Code), Republic Act No. 7607 (Magna Carta for Small Farmers), Republic Act No. 7884 (National Dairy Act), Republic Act No. 7900 (High Value Crops Act), Republic Act No. 8178 (Agricultural Tariffication Act), Republic Act No. 7308 (Seed Industry Development Act), Republic Act No. 9168 (Plant Variety Protection Act), Republic Act No. 7581 (Price Act), Republic Act No. 71 (Price Tag Law), Executive Order No. 51 (Milk Code), and Republic Act No. 8976 (Philippine Food Fortification Act of 2000), have the over-all, arching objective of guaranteeing the right of Filipino citizens to adequate food.

However, the lack of a comprehensive framework embodying right to adequate food is a chasm between policy and implementation. Public funds are not only inadequate but dissipated due to corruption. Who could forget the PhP728 million fertilizer scam, the PhP5 billion swine scam, the PhP3.1 billion irrigation scam, or the questionable disbursement of PhP120 million out of Gintiugan Masaganang Ani funds? A comprehensive framework law, therefore, is essential to make the right to adequate food meaningful. This comprehensive law will not only harmonize provisions of all laws related to Filipinos’ right to adequate food but would also clarify the scope and content of the right, establish standards for compliance, lay down principles to shape the process of realization, and prohibit violations of the right to adequate food.

In view of the foregoing, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.

First Regular Session

Introduced by REP. JOSE CHRISTOPHER Y. BELMONTE

AN ACT
PROVIDING A FRAMEWORK FOR THE RIGHT TO ADEQUATE FOOD, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Philippines in Congress assembles:

SECTION 1. Short Title. – This Act shall be known as the "Right to Adequate Food Framework Act."

SEC. 2. Statement of Policy. – Consistent with the principles enshrined in the Constitution as well as the provisions of the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights, Convention on the Rights of the Child, and Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women, to which the Philippines is a State Party, it is hereby made the declared policy of the State to guarantee the right to adequate food.

Adequate food is not a matter of charity, but of legal entitlement. Hunger is inconsistent with human dignity and human rights, and must be eliminated. The State shall provide for a framework to address and eliminate hunger in an organized manner.

SEC. 3. Definitions. – As used in this Act:

a) Food refers to solid, liquid and semi-liquid nourishment, as well as drinking water, and when taken into the body serves to nourish, build and repair tissues, supply energy, or regulate body processes;

b) Food blockade refers to an act of cutting food supplies from a particular area by force, either in part or totally;

c) Food emergency refers to a situation in which access to food is endangered, as that caused by natural events like drought, floods, storms, earthquakes, or crop failures resulting from pests or diseases; or by human agency such as internal or international armed conflict;

d) Hunger refers to a condition in which people do not get enough food to eat to provide the nutrients for fully productive, active and healthy living due to unavailability and inaccessibility of food. It can be acute, such as during a major disaster when food supply channels are cut, or chronic, when people are regularly not getting enough food to conduct an active life for a long time.

It is also a condition of starvation, which is not having enough food of any sort to eat, or undernourishment, which is having enough food to eat, but of inadequate quality;

e) Right to adequate food refers to the right to have regular, permanent and unrestricted access, either directly or by means of financial purchases, to quantitatively and qualitatively adequate, sufficient and safe food, corresponding to the cultural traditions of the people to which a consumer belongs, and which ensure physical and mental, individual and collective, fulfilling and dignified life, free of fear; and

f) Vulnerable groups refer to those who are particularly disadvantaged. These include indigenous peoples, ethnic, linguistic or religious minorities, persons with disabilities, persons living with HIV or AIDS, refugees and internally displaced people, elderly, women, including pregnant and lactating mothers and children, particularly those from zero to twenty-three (23) months of age.

SEC. 4. Normative Content. – The right to adequate food is realized when every man, woman and child, alone or in community with others, has physical and economic access at all times to adequate food, or means for its procurement. The right to adequate food will therefore not be interpreted in a narrow or restrictive sense, which equates it with a minimum package of calories, proteins and other specific nutrients. The right to adequate food will have to be realized progressively. However, the core obligation is to take the necessary action to mitigate and alleviate hunger, even in times of natural or other disasters. The right to be free from hunger ensures a minimum daily nutritional intake and the bare survival of the person. The right to adequate food goes beyond freedom from hunger. Central to the realization of the right to adequate food is an adequacy standard in terms of quality, quantity and cultural acceptability, sustainability of food availability and access.

a) The concept of adequacy is particularly significant in relation to the right to adequate food since it serves to underline a number of factors which must be taken into account in determining whether particular foods or diets that are accessible, can be considered the most appropriate under given circumstances. The notion of sustainability is intrinsically linked to the notion of adequate food or food security, implying food being accessible for both present and future generations. The precise meaning of adequacy is to a large extent determined by prevailing social, economic, cultural, climatic, ecological and other conditions, while sustainability incorporates the notion of long-term availability and accessibility.

b) The core content of the right to adequate food implies:
1) The availability of food in a quantity and quality sufficient to satisfy the dietary needs of individuals, free from adverse substances, and acceptable within a given culture; and

2) The accessibility of such food in ways that are sustainable, and do not interfere with the enjoyment of other human rights.

c) Dietary needs refer to the diet as a whole contains a mix of nutrients for physical and mental growth, development and maintenance, and physical activity, that are in compliance with human physiological needs at all stages throughout the life cycle, and according to gender and occupation. Measures therefore need to be taken to maintain, adapt or strengthen dietary diversity and appropriate consumption and feeding patterns, including optimal breast-feeding, while ensuring that changes in availability and access to food supply as a minimum do not negatively affect dietary composition and intake.

d) Freedom from adverse substances refers to the requirements for food safety and for a range of protective measures by both public and private means to prevent contamination of foodstuffs through adulteration, or through bad environmental hygiene, or inappropriate handling at different stages throughout the food chain. Care must also be taken to identify and avoid or destroy naturally occurring toxins.

e) Cultural or consumer acceptability implies the need also to take into account, as far as possible, perceived non nutrient-based values attached to food and food consumption and informed consumer concerns regarding the nature of accessible food supplies.

f) Availability refers to the possibilities either for feeding oneself directly from productive land or other natural resources, or for well-functioning distribution, processing and market systems that can move food from the site of production to where it is needed in accordance with demand.

g) Accessibility refers to economic and physical accessibility:

1) Economic accessibility implies that personal or household financial costs associated with the acquisition of food for an adequate diet should be at a level such that the attainment and satisfaction of other basic needs are not threatened, or compromised. Economic accessibility applies to any acquisition pattern or entitlement through which people procure their food, and is a measure of the extent to which it is satisfactory for the enjoyment of the right to adequate food. Socially vulnerable groups such as landless persons and other particularly impoverished segments of the population need attention through special programs.

2) Physical accessibility implies that adequate food must be accessible to everyone, including physically vulnerable individuals, such as infants and young children, elderly people, those belonging to the informal sector, the physically disabled, the terminally ill and persons with persistent medical problems, including the mentally ill. Victims of natural disasters, people living in disaster-prone areas, and other specially disadvantaged groups, need special attention, and sometimes priority consideration with respect to accessibility of food. A particular vulnerability is that of many indigenous population groups whose access to their ancestral lands is threatened.

SEC. 5. Conditions for the exercise of the right to adequate food. – Every person has the right to live in conditions that will enable the person:

a) To feed directly from productive land or other natural resources; or rely on well-functioning food distribution, processing and market systems, or both;

b) To be financially acquire a sufficient quantity and quality of food and to satisfy other basic needs;

c) To be safe from the risk of losing access to food, as a consequence of sudden shocks, like an economic or climatic crisis, or brought about by internal displacements of people, or cyclical events, such as seasonal food insecurity;

d) To have the opportunity of good food utilization, through access to an adequate diet, clean water, sanitation and health care, to reach a state of nutritional well-being, where all physiological needs are met; and

e) To access foods or diets that is the most appropriate under given circumstances, in terms of their nutritional value and cultural acceptability.

Every infant, girl and boy has a right to adequate food and to optimal health, development and nutrition adequate for their age, growth and development.

Every woman has a right to adequate food and adequate nutrition during pregnancy and lactation.

No limitation on the right to adequate food may be allowed, unless it is provided by law, is necessary for the purpose of a compelling public interest, and is compatible with the nature of the right to adequate food.

SEC. 6. Freedom from hunger. – Every person has a right to be free from hunger.

Every person suffering from hunger or under nutrition, or at risk of suffering from hunger or under nutrition is entitled to a minimum amount of food according to his or her age, sex, health status and occupation, as provided for in Section 13 of this Act.

SEC. 7. Non-discrimination. – Any distinction, exclusion or restriction made on the basis of race, color, sex, age, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status, which has the effect or purpose of impairing or limiting the capacity of an individual to exercise the right to adequate food, is unlawful and will be sanctioned in accordance with law.

All forms of discrimination against women with regard to the guaranteed right to adequate food, including less favorable treatment of women for reasons of pregnancy and maternity, will be eliminated and prevented. The equality of opportunities between men and women will be promoted.

The prohibition of discrimination will not be read to include government action to remedy past effects of discrimination against particular individuals or groups and to promote equality of opportunities with regard to the right to adequate food.

SEC. 8. Principles. – The principles upon which the provisions of this Act are founded are:

a) Participation – People should be able to determine their own well-being and participate in the planning, design, monitoring and evaluation of decisions affecting them. Individuals are able to take part in the conduct of public affairs, including the adoption and implementation of State policies. Such participation is active, free and meaningful, whether it is exercised directly or through intermediary organizations representing specific interests. It is supported by capacity-building and appropriate integrative mechanisms where necessary.

b) Accountability – Public officials are answerable to their superiors and to the people they serve. Application of the principle of accountability in the context of the right to adequate food framework law requires clear assignment of responsibilities and functions to public authorities for implementation of the framework law and any subsequent measures to be taken. In addition, the expected results are spelled out clearly and appropriate procedures are established.

c) Nondiscrimination – The protection of human rights objectively and reasonably the same for everybody, irrespective of sex, age, race, color, religion or any other ground. In addition to specifically prohibiting discrimination on any ground, this principle requires specific measures aimed at correcting de facto discrimination or eliminating conditions that cause or help to perpetuate discrimination, as well as measures promoting equality. In the context of this Act, it means paying particular attention to those groups that cannot enjoy their rights as fully as others.

d) Transparency – The public should be given free and open access to timely and reliable information on the decisions and performance of public authorities. Holders of public office are as open as possible about all their decisions and actions that may affect the free exercise of the right to adequate food. Applying the principle of transparency within the context of this Act means that people are provided with essential information about the decision-making process and those accountable and responsible for it. People also have the power to demand information on the processes that feed into the achievement of the particular entitlement, with an easy and low-cost corrective check to malfeasance.

e) Human dignity – Persons have absolute and inherent worth, simply because they are human, not by virtue of any social status or a particular power. This Act recognizes in an unequivocal form that every person has a right to adequate food. To comply with this principle in the implementation of this Act, the State, through its public officials, treats persons equally and respects their human worth and dignity.

f) Empowerment – The people have power, capacity, capabilities and access needed to change their own lives, including the power to seek from the State remedies for violations of their human rights. This principle is the logical consequence of all the preceding principles. In the context of this Act, empowerment entails including specific provisions on awareness-raising, capacity-building and right to adequate food education.

g) Rule of law – Government authority is legitimately exercised only in accordance with written, publicly disclosed and accessible laws adopted and enforced in conformity with established procedures. The principle is intended as a safeguard against arbitrary use of State authority and lawless acts of both organizations and individuals. Any implementing rules and regulations to be adopted for ensuring the implementation of this Act will be clear, fair and accessible. The rule of law also means that no person or body can breach the law with impunity. There is access to justice including the right to an effective remedy for anyone whose rights are violated, as well as the guarantee of due process in all legal proceedings.
SEC. 9. Governmental obligations. – The State has the duty to respect, protect and fulfil the right to adequate food.

a) Respect – The State has the obligation not to interfere with or impair the enjoyment of the right to adequate food. No public authority may deprive any person of food or means for its procurement, apply laws and regulations, or pursue a policy or practice, in a way that could result in preventing the enjoyment of or infringing the human right to adequate food, or repeal formally or suspend legislation necessary for the continued enjoyment of the right to adequate food.

b) Protect – The State has the duty to provide guarantees against threats and risks stemming from private actors or societal forces that are controllable by State action.
It is bound to take preventive measures necessary to protect persons whose capacity to access sufficient and adequate food or means for its procurement is endangered by the acts of others. It also ought to review the relevant administrative and legislative framework ensuring that activities within their competence undertaken by private actors do not infringe the right to adequate food of others.

c) Fulfil – The State has the power to facilitate the enjoyment of the right to adequate food by adopting or pursuing appropriate policies and measures, in a manner to foster and promote the human right to adequate food and to create and maintain conditions under which every person can freely and regularly enjoy the right to adequate food. It is equally the duty of the State to provide for right to adequate food, by adopting and putting in place measures to provide food, or means for its procurement, to persons who cannot take care of their own needs, due to reasons beyond their control, in particular for children whose parents die or disappear or otherwise no longer take care of them.

SEC. 10. Targets. – The State shall ensure that in two and a half years after the effectivity of this Act, the incidence of hunger will be reduced, from the level current at the time of the passage of this Act, by twenty-five percent (25%): Provided, That five (5) years after the effectivity of this Act such incidence of hunger will be further reduced by twenty-five percent (25%): Provided, further, That in seven and a half (7½) years, it will be further reduced the same period, the State shall ensure that the following indicators will considerably and

g) Coverage of marginalized and disadvantaged population taking part in social transfer programs;
h) Percentage of marginalized and disadvantaged population covered by a public nutrition supplement program;
i) Percentage of population aware of available food and nutrition programs; and
j) Coverage of school feeding programs.

Periodic reviews will be undertaken to ensure compliance with set targets. In the implementation of this Act, priority will be given to identify areas with chronically malnourished population. In measuring the incidence of hunger, the key primary data sources will include national nutrition surveys, household surveys of the Philippine Statistics Authority (PSA), namely the Family Income and Expenditure Survey and the Annual Poverty Indicators Survey, and global hunger indices as benchmarks.
