EXPLANATORY NOTE

Filipinos are known all over the world with how we, as a nation, treasure family ties and values, shown especially by the care, respect, and love we give to our elderly. Fondly called our "lolo’s" and "lola’s," the population of Filipinos aged 60 years old and above numbers to around 8.7 million, representing 8.2% of the country’s total population of 107 million, based on the 2018 estimates of the Commission on Population and Development (CPD).

The CPD also projects that the Philippines will have an “aging” population between 2030 and 2035. The United Nations Population Fund supports this finding- it projected in 2012 that by 2050, the population of senior citizens will grow by 15% to 23.63 million. In December 2018, the Philippine Institute for Development Studies (PIDS) also conducted a study which showed that our country will transition to an aging society by year 2032.

But while the number of senior citizens is growing, the current social safety nets remain inadequate. Out of the 8.7 million senior citizens, around 5.8 million are not covered by contributory pension, such as the Social Security System, the Government Social Insurance System and other pension systems. And out of the 5.8 million, only 3.4 million are currently covered by the Social Pension Program for Indigent Senior Citizens of the Department of Social Welfare and Development, leaving around 2.4 million without any pension at all.

Widening the coverage and the amount of the social pension program is a laudable measure being sought right now to address these twin problems. However, there are other equally-demanding social programs that need funding too. In addition, under the law, senior citizens are also currently entitled to privileges such as the 20% discount on medicines, medical supplies and equipment, medical services like lab tests and x-rays, transportation fares, hotels, restaurants, recreation centers, and places of leisure. But using these discounts and benefits assume that senior citizens have the money in the first place.

Ang Probinsyano Party-List (APPL) believes that there is no other timely act of love that reaffirms the Filipino tradition of caring for the elderly, addresses the inadequate social program for senior citizens, prevents their mental and physical deterioration, taps their wealth of life and work experiences, fosters their capacity to attain a more meaningful and productive aging, motivates and maximizes their contributions to nation building and augments their pensions and retirement savings, if they have any, than giving the elderly the access to employment opportunities.

This is what this bill is aiming for. Currently, while we have the Expanded Senior Citizens Act of 2010 and the Anti-Age Discrimination in Employment Act, we see that the government, despite having various unfilled positions, has only taken the passive role of providing information and matching services for senior citizens in private employment. Moreover, while private entities are entitled to tax deduction of 15% of the total amount paid as salaries, we observe that this barely encourages companies to actually hire senior citizens for 15 years now, since 2004.

Hence, under the bill, we provided that government offices shall take active roles in inviting, selecting and hiring senior citizens. The Department of Labor and Employment and the National Commission of Senior Citizens shall also assist not just in information and job matching services but, all the more, in aggressively promoting the employment of senior citizens, especially those below the poverty threshold, and identifying industries and positions in both the public and private sectors.

In addition, private entities that will employ qualified senior citizens shall be entitled to a tax deduction equivalent to 70% of the total amount paid as wages to senior citizens. Usual requirements such as police, NBI or barangay clearance and medical or fit-to-work certificate shall also be provided for free to senior citizen applicants and employees.

An important component of the bill too is conducting a study on the socio-economic effect of either mandating a national policy or giving employers the option of (a) raising the retirement age of employees; (b) ensuring continued employment beyond retirement age but with reduced wages or other cost-effective arrangements based on factors such as productivity and duties and responsibilities; or (c) abolishing the retirement age. With this study as our guide, our country can unleash the potential of our own senior citizens, taking the cue from other countries with established senior citizen employment program (e.g. Japan, Singapore and Hong Kong) which, despite having social contexts different from us, have already gathered overwhelming proof that promoting senior citizen employment has benefits.

Again, this bill is about cherishing our elderly. More than the usual dole-outs, giving them another chance at employment will provide the means to free them from poverty and greatly motivate them to fully participate in society.

In view of the foregoing, the approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
