EXPLANATORY NOTE

The autopsy provides the best evidence in establishing the cause of death. It reveals the wounds and other injuries caused by any action or substance that may be related to the case. Such findings produced by an autopsy helps in the overall investigation of crimes, especially those involving suspicious deaths.

However, there are obstacles in maximizing the use of forensic autopsy despite its obvious benefits on criminal investigation. Currently, there is the Sanitation Code of the Philippines which is the main measure regarding the conduct of autopsies. But this is inadequate to provide for mandatory autopsy in special cases such as deaths involving violent or suspicious circumstances. Hence, there is a need for a law that will mandate and regulate forensic autopsies.

This bill seeks to aid in criminal investigation by allowing the State to order mandatory autopsies of dead bodies resulting from any violent, suspicious, questionable, or unnatural manner. This will also eliminate possible concealment and escape from liability of perpetrators. Finally, this will assist in the prosecution of criminal actions and dispensation of justice.
