In recent years, the advancements in technology have developed, and become more pervasive than ever before. Today we are more connected, more open to express our opinions, and more vulnerable at the same time.

By 2020, it is estimated that smartphone penetration alone will have reached at least 50.3% of our population.¹ This does not yet count other forms of devices such as tablets, computers, smart watches, etc.

The current platforms of connectivity, combined with This platform of online connectivity creates a perfect cover for scrupulous individuals to perpetrate their crimes.

It has been only six years since the passage of RA 10364, amending RA 9208, or the original anti-Trafficking in Persons law in the country. These laws held their own, and the most recent amendment expanded the scope and increased the penalties significantly.

It is yet time to again amend that law, to bring it to this new technological age, and to protect our citizens from potential online sexual exploitation and trafficking.

Filipino minors are most adept with the current state of technology, and are also the most exposed to the risks and dangers of online exploitation. Online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC) continues to be a serious threat to our children, where minors are coerced, often by their own relatives, to perform sexual acts on the internet.

As a result, online child abuse is now among the top cybercrimes in the Philippines.

In the same way the perpetrators of online child sexual exploitation rely on the technological developments to further their illicit endeavors, so too can the law enforcement officials rely on that technology to better identify, arrest, and prosecute them. These technological solutions can reduce the amount of time it takes to identify perpetrators and victims, and they can proactively remove child sexual exploitation and abuse material.²

Therefore, there is a need to modernize the law to better ensure that our law enforcers are properly empowered. Hence, this bill.

This bill provides much needed tools in both prosecution and prevention of further harm to victims. It enhances the ability of law enforcement agencies to use court-authorized wiretaps in investigating online sexual exploitation. Hence, as this will allow law enforcers to collect strong evidence, the need for the child to testify in court during trial may be dispensed with preventing further trauma.

The fight against online sexual exploitation of children is a shared responsibility of both government and the general public. This bill seeks to tap the assistance of private enterprises, which by the nature of their business activities may come into contact at the first instance with a suspected trafficking situation. The intervention from private enterprises can play a crucial role in the prevention of TIP and the protection of the victims. These private enterprises, include internet service providers (ISPs) & telecommunication companies, and tourism-oriented establishments, including hotels, resorts, inns, motels, & other related facilities.

There is also a need to strengthen the membership of the Inter-Agency Council Against Trafficking (IACAT), to complement the existing members in the full implementation of the anti-trafficking act in the digital age. Hence this bill seeks to include as new members the: 1. Secretary, Department of Information and Communications Technology (DICT); 2. Secretary, Department of Transportation (DOTr); 3. Administrator, Overseas Workers Welfare Administrator (OWWA); and 4. Director, National Bureau of Investigation (NBI).

Lastly, and more importantly, the bill will help support victim-survivors and provide more resources to empower and assist victims-survivors in their recovery process by institutionalizing existing programs on recovery and reintegration.

The approval of this bill is earnestly requested.
