AN ACT
ESTABLISHING THE OFFICE OF RESEARCH ON WOMEN'S HEALTH

EXPLANATORY NOTE

It is the policy of the State to protect and promote the right to health of every Filipino. Given the dynamic and vital roles that Filipino women play in the society and the numerous risks on their health and well-being, it is imperative that we adopt the best practices of developed countries and find ways to address these kinds of issues on health.

In 2015, almost 92 percent of all maternal deaths in Asia Pacific - around 78,000 - occurred in just 12 countries. The Philippines is one of these 12 countries with 1,721 registered maternal deaths. The number of maternal deaths in the country is dropping by only about 2% per year. This means that the number of Filipino pregnant women who die every year remains alarmingly high.

The United States of America established the Office of Research on Women’s Health (ORWH) at the National Institute of Health in September 1990 in order “to strengthen, develop, and increase research on diseases, disorders, and conditions that are unique to, more prevalent among, or more serious in women, or for which there are different risk factors for women than for men.”¹

The research undertaken by the OWRH has found out that sex and gender identity play crucial roles in health, wellness, and disease progression. Hence, a research center focused on the nuances and specifics tailored for women’s health is important.
This bill seeks to establish the Office of Research on Women's Health in the Philippines.

In view of the foregoing, the passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
