EXPLANATORY NOTE

Everywhere in Social Media, there is a call for discipline; discipline in traffic, in waste management, and generally, in anything that pertains to coexisting in the same bounds. It is apparent that discipline cannot be taught overnight. Most of the time, establishing strict measures for the sake of discipline lead to public clamor because at the onset, it is seen as an inconvenience. At times when measures of discipline are really put forward, many if not all, find their way around it. It is what many have been accustomed to because it is the easier route.

The absence of Good Manners and Right Conduct (GMRC) in the backbone of the country’s basic education curriculum is an outright irony because respect, especially for the elderly is deeply embedded in our culture, hence all the more should its passing be sought after. It is high time that all children, rich or poor, be firmly educated with GMRC. Though parents are regarded as their children’s first teachers, it is the duty of the State to establish the principles of GMRC as almost second nature to ensure a prolific future where ideally, citizens get along to achieve the common goal of development.

Our national hero, Dr. Jose P. Rizal once said “Ang kabataan ay ang pag-asa ng bayan.” – from this, one can understand the importance of ensuring that in the formative years of children, the idea of good and bad is well-instilled into them. The revival of GMRC in the basic education curriculum is a way to achieve this. Instead of tirelessly pounding on the lack of discipline there is today, children, through the GMRC can pave the way to a better, more disciplined future. The passage of this bill is earnestly sought because a country can never fully develop if its focus is not people-centric, and all the more if it is not holistic.
