Eighteenth Congress
First Regular Session

HOUSE BILL NO. 6257

Introduced by Representatives Jorge Antonio P. Bustos and Presley C. De Jesus

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill seeks to grant additional benefits to prosecutors of the National Prosecution Service, amending for the purpose Republic Act (RA) No. 10071, otherwise known as the “Prosecution Service Act of 2010.”

RA 10071, enacted on April 8, 2010, created and established a National Prosecution Service composed of the prosecution staff in the Office of the Secretary of Justice and such number of regional prosecution offices, offices of the provincial prosecutor and offices of the city prosecutor. They are primarily responsible for the preliminary investigation and prosecution of all cases involving violations of penal laws under the supervision of the Secretary of Justice.

The existing law provides retirement benefits and special allowances to prosecutors. However, the great risks and perils that prosecutors encounter also need to be properly compensated. It is only reasonable that they are granted hazard pay because of the threat and imminent danger they face due to the nature of their profession.

This proposed measure seeks to grant additional benefits to prosecutors by providing a monthly hazard pay during their incumbency in an amount equivalent to twenty-five percent (25%) of their basic salary. Corollary to this benefit is the issuance of service firearms for their protection against death threats as a consequence of the performance of their duty to prosecute cases involving notorious and dangerous characters of the society. Further, this bill grants survivorship benefits, primarily to the surviving legitimate spouse and the dependent children. The survivorship pension shall be based on the highest monthly salary plus the highest monthly aggregate of transportation, living and representation allowances which the deceased had been receiving at the time of death.

The additional benefits and privileges are being proposed under this measure in recognition of the important tasks of prosecutors and the sacrifice that they make to ensure that criminal cases are prosecuted, miscarriage of justice is avoided, and that ultimately, justice is served.

In view of the foregoing, approval of this bill is earnestly sought.
