Children have the right to survival, development and protection from harm. Thus, Art. XV, Sec. 3(b) of the 1987 Philippine Constitution provides that "the State shall defend the right of children to assistance, including proper care and nutrition, and special protection from all forms of neglect, abuse, cruelty, exploitation and other conditions prejudicial to their development."

To pursue this right, the State is mandated to provide every child neglected, abused, surrendered, dependent, abandoned, and under socio-cultural difficulties, an alternative family that can provide the love and care he or she needs, as well as opportunities for personal growth and development.

In formulating alternative care, custody and adoption policies, the best interest of the child should always be the paramount consideration. These policies should also be in accordance with the rights of the child as provided under Article 3 of Presidential Decree No. 603, otherwise known as the "Child and Youth Welfare Code, to wit:

Article 3. Rights of the Child. - xxx

(1) Every child is endowed with the dignity and worth of a human being from the moment of his conception, as generally accepted in medical parlance, and has, therefore, the right to be born well.

(2) Every child has the right to a wholesome family life that will provide him with love, care and understanding, guidance and counseling, and moral and material security.

The dependent or abandoned child shall be provided with the nearest substitute for a home.

(3) Every child has the right to a well-rounded development of his personality to the end that he may become a happy, useful and active member of society.
The gifted child shall be given opportunity and encouragement to develop his special talents.

The emotionally disturbed or socially maladjusted child shall be treated with sympathy and understanding, and shall be entitled to treatment and competent care.

The physically or mentally handicapped child shall be given the treatment, education and care required by his particular condition.

(4) Every child has the right to a balanced diet, adequate clothing, sufficient shelter, proper medical attention, and all the basic physical requirements of a healthy and vigorous life.

(5) Every child has the right to be brought up in an atmosphere of morality and rectitude for the enrichment and the strengthening of his character.

(6) Every child has the right to an education commensurate with his abilities and to the development of his skills for the improvement of his capacity for service to himself and to his fellowmen.

(7) Every child has the right to full opportunities for safe and wholesome recreation and activities, individual as well as social, for the wholesome use of his leisure hours.

(8) Every child has the right to protection against exploitation, improper influences, hazards, and other conditions or circumstances prejudicial to his physical, mental, emotional, social and moral development.

(9) Every child has the right to live in a community and a society that can offer him an environment free from pernicious influences and conducive to the promotion of his health and the cultivation of his desirable traits and attributes.

(10) Every child has the right to the care, assistance, and protection of the State, particularly when his parents or guardians fail or are unable to provide him with his fundamental needs for growth, development, and improvement.

(11) Every child has the right to an efficient and honest government that will deepen his faith in democracy and inspire him with the morality of the constituted authorities both in their public and private lives.

(12) Every child has the right to grow up as a free individual, in an atmosphere of peace, understanding, tolerance, and universal brotherhood, and with the determination to contribute his share in the building of a better world.

In spite of the aforementioned Constitutional provision and the provisions of the Child and Youth Welfare Code on the Rights of the Child, statistics provided by the United Nations’ Children’s Right and Emergency Relief Organization show that one million eight hundred thousand (1.8 million) children in the Philippines, or more than one percent (1%) of the entire population, qualify as “abandoned or neglected”. These children are either victims of grinding poverty, natural calamities or armed conflicts, or, unfortunately, do not have parents willing and/or able to take good care of them. Many of these children are usually placed under institutional care in government-run institutions or in accredited residential care facilities. In extreme cases, many of them end up on the streets.

This offends against the policy of the State to defend the rights of children to survival and development and to be protected from harm. The grim reality is that there are not enough institutions that attend to the needs of abandoned and neglected Filipino children. Children in those institutions do not get the warmth and affection they need and the nurturing atmosphere for them to reach their fullest potential. The best response to this concern is to make sure that children without parental care or at risk of losing it for one reason or another are provided family care options in an environment conducive to a child’s development outside of these institutions.

Indeed, there is a pressing need to address the worsening situation of abandoned or neglected children in the country. This bill aims to codify the laws on alternative child care and simplify the processes involved in providing abandoned and neglected children the opportunity to have the family care and love and nurturing environment they need to develop their capabilities. Towards this end, this bill will ensure that the Philippines will have a system of cooperation with other countries to protect Filipino children vulnerable to neglect, abuse, abandonment, and/or exploitation.

Under this proposed Act, the Intercountry Adoption Board is reorganized into a one-stop agency to be called the National Authority for Child Care to improve and expedite the processes of adoption, foster care and other modes of alternative child care. The bill also presents ways to effectively streamline adoption procedures and make formal adoption more accessible.

Given the importance and urgency of the bill, its swift passage is earnestly sought.

Sec. 4. Guiding Principles of Alternative Child Care.—Alternative Child Care (ACC) shall be guided by the following:

1. The family being the fundamental group of society and the natural environment for the growth, well-being, and protection of children, efforts should primarily be directed to enable the child to remain in or return to the care of his/her parents, or when appropriate, extended family members;

2. The State should ensure that families have access to forms of support in the caregiving role. Every child and young person should live in a supportive, protective, and caring environment that promotes his/her full potential. Children with inadequate or no parental care are at special risk of being denied such a nurturing environment;

3. Where the child’s own family is unable, even with appropriate support, to provide adequate care for the child, or abandons, or relinquishes the child, the State is responsible for protecting the rights of the child and ensuring appropriate alternative care, with or through competent local authorities and duly authorized civil society organizations;
4. It is the role of the State, through its competent authorities, to ensure the supervision of the safety, well-being, and development of any child placed in alternative care and the regular review of the appropriateness of the care arrangement provided;

5. All decisions, initiatives and approaches falling within the scope of the present guidelines should be made on a case-by-case basis, with a view, notably, to ensuring the child’s safety and security, and must be grounded in the best interests and rights of the child concerned, in conformity with the principle of non-discrimination and taking due account of the gender perspective;

6. The Principle of Subsidiary requires that all efforts shall be exerted to ensure that local solutions should be first found before a child is placed for inter-country adoption;

7. Adoptive parents, as well as foster parents, must be protected from attempts to disturb their parental authority and custody over their adopted or fostered child;

8. All decisions concerning alternative care should take full account of the desirability of maintaining, as much as possible, closeness to the child’s habitual place of residence, in order to facilitate contact and potential reintegration with the family and to minimize disruption of educational, cultural, and social life;

9. Decisions regarding children in alternative care, should have due regard for the importance of ensuring children a family-based care, group foster care, and of meeting their basic need for safe and long-term relationship to their caregivers, with permanency generally being a key goal;

10. Children must be treated with dignity and respect at all times and must benefit from effective protection from abuse, neglect, and all forms of exploitation, whether on the part of care providers, peers, or third parties, in whatever care setting they may find themselves;

11. Siblings, with existing bonds, should in principle not be separated from placements in alternative care unless there is a clear risk of abuse or other justification in the best interest of the child. In any case, every effort should be made to enable siblings to grow together, maintain contact with each other, unless this is against their wishes or interests;

12. All entities and individuals engaged in the provision of alternative child care which received due authorization to do so from competent authority are subject to regular monitoring and review. Authorities should develop appropriate criteria for assessing the professional and ethical fitness of care providers and for their accreditation, monitoring, and supervision;

13. Provisions of alternative child care should never be undertaken with a prime purpose of furthering the political, religious, or economic goals of the providers; and

14. Such other principles in accordance with the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.
