EXPLANATORY NOTE

It is a policy of the State under the 1987 Constitution of the Philippines to protect the rights of Persons with Disabilities and promote their welfare and development.

The National Council on Disability Affairs (NCDA), in its present state, is the national government agency with a mandate to formulate policies and coordinate all interventions pertaining to the protection and promotion of the rights and welfare of Persons with Disabilities. It is further tasked to monitor the implementation of all disability related to local and national laws as well as the compliance of the country in international covenants disability issues.

The history of the government’s intervention on disability matters started with the creation of the National Commission Concerning Disabled Persons by virtue of Presidential Decree No. 1509 issued by former President Ferdinand Marcos. The Commission was composed of the heads of several national government agencies and representatives from the private and disabled sectors. Then, by virtue of Executive Order No. 123 dated 30 January 1987 signed by former President Corazon C. Aquino, the Commission was replaced by the National Council for the Welfare of Disabled Persons and attached to the Department of Social Welfare and Development, with structure and functional organization deemed necessary for effective and efficient delivery of services to PWDs. The Council was transferred from DSWD to the Office of the President when Executive Order No. 676 was issued by former President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo on October 25, 207, but DSWD served as the oversight arm of the president. Later, with the issuance of Executive Order 709, NCWDP was renamed as NCDA and attached to the Office of the President. During the administration of former President Benigno Aquino III, NCDA was transferred from the President to the DSWD.
Carefully examining the present structure of the Council, the administration of its affairs is quite ambiguous. The organization and administration of the main office tasked to oversee and implement the laws relating to the empowerment of Persons with Disabilities must be clearly defined and made responsive to the present time.

It should be given some sort of independence and autonomy. Also, there is the dire need to expand its powers and functions in order to fully respond to the needs of the sector. Persons with disabilities must actively engage in all activities, programs and projects that will benefit them. They should not just be recipients or passive agents, but as active actors. They must be given the opportunity to do things for themselves.

This is the idea of inclusivity.

No person can determine what the PWDs need but themselves. "Nothing About Us Without Us!" (Nihil de nobis, sine nobis) is a slogan used by Persons with Disabilities which means that no policy should be decided without the full and direct participation of members of the group affected by that policy. Persons with Disabilities can very well step up to take positions of governance.

In terms of leadership, many of them have the capacity to contribute to nation building. This is why, from its present name, the Council shall become the National Commission on the Empowerment of Persons with Disabilities. Now is the opportune time to trust them with this noble undertaking.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate approval of this proposal is earnestly sought.
