EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill seeks to rename the Tublay School of Home Industries (TSHI) in Brgy. Caponga, Municipality of Tublay to Andres Acop Cosalan School of Home Industries in tribute to the principal author of House Bill No. 12402, Sixth Congress, establishing the school. He wrote, in the face of the growing poverty experienced in the province:

“A considerable wealth of manpower made idle by the utter lack of agriculture lands to work on xxx can be harnessed to engaged in home and cottage industries. The people are willing and eager to learn but the government must provide the means to teach and train them.”

The bill eventually passed into law and became the Republic Act No. 5301 in June 15, 1968.

Cong. Andy, as he is fondly called, was an accomplished leader and a remarkable family man. A self-made man, he supported himself while studying by working as a houseboy and altar boy, a public school teacher and a reporter, because he wanted to earn for his own needs and not rely on his well-to-do parents. He was an active lawyer in the labor movement and a law professor before he eventually became a legislator. He also worked as a timber cutter and a miner like most of the Cordillerans. In Congress, he passed several landmark legislations, including the separation of the old Mountain Province that eventually led to the existence of Benguet, Mt. Province, Baguio, Ifugao and Kalinga-Apayao Legislative districts, increasing the voice of the region.

For these reasons, the approval of this bill is earnestly solicited.

In view of the foregoing, the early passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
