Section XIV, Article 1 of the 1987 Constitution provides that:

"The State shall protect and promote the right of all citizens to quality education at all levels and shall take appropriate steps to make such education accessible to all."

In response to the coronavirus pandemic, the government has declared a State of Public Health Emergency throughout the country. The pandemic has crippled the whole nation, including the educational progress of the students. Face-to-face classes and other school activities were suspended. Educational institutions were also forced to end the school year earlier.

To continue with the scheduled start of the next school year, the Department of Education has pushed for the use of blended learning during the pandemic. The program uses a combination of online distant learning and personal delivery of printed materials to the homes of students. However, despite the efforts of the Department of Education to proceed with the program, many have expressed their doubts, including the President, on its implementation especially for the plight of the marginalized sector.¹ Most families have no access to a fast and reliable internet connection and on tools such as computers and tablet, making this learning program only favorable to those who can afford it. Facilitating blended learning may also be difficult for parents who were not able to finish their education or to even go to school.

As we are witnessing now, the educational system can also be disrupted during an emergency or a calamity, such as the COVID-19 pandemic. There are hazards that need to be taken into consideration to ensure the safety of the students and faculty. Our policies should then be able to foresee such inevitable circumstances. However, we also need to make certain that academic progress for all students is not impeded.

As such, this bill seeks to mandate the Department of Education to provide qualifying examinations for acceleration for students who are affected by a declaration of state of emergency or state of calamity. This bill acknowledges the constraints that emergencies or calamities pose to the students, parents, and faculty. The wisdom of this measure is to guarantee every Filipino student to have equal access to education and ensure their academic progression even in trying times.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
