EXPLANATORY NOTE

"This is a time [COVID-19 pandemic] when, more than ever, governments need to be open and transparent, responsive and accountable to the people they are seeking to protect." - UN Secretary-General António Guterres

A citizen’s right to official information is essential for democracy. Individuals with ready access to public documents discern better, and are able to meaningfully exercise sovereignty over their government.

No less than Article II, Sec. 28 of the 1987 Philippine Constitution affirms: "The right of the people to information on matters of public concern shall be recognized. Access to official records, and to documents, and papers pertaining to official acts, transactions, or decisions, as well as government research data used as basis for policy development, shall be afforded the citizen, subject to such limitations as may be provided by law."

The Constitution also underscores that government must operate with utmost transparency and accountability. Article III, Sec. 7 of the Constitution declares: "Subject to reasonable conditions prescribed by the law, the State adopts and implements a policy of full public disclosure of all its transactions involving public interest."

The foregoing measure affirms these constitutional imperatives by establishing broad guidelines and procedures that operationalize them. Without such framework, the rights and obligations enshrined under the Constitution would be meaningless, allowing government to operate under a shroud of secrecy and away from public scrutiny.

Hence, this bill narrows the opportunity for abuse and helps restore trust and confidence in government. Anti-corruption statutes cannot be fully enforced if there are no disclosure and information statutes.

In February 2020, UN Secretary-General António Guterres launched his Call to Action program to put human dignity and the promise of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights at the core of the government’s work in combating the COVID-19 pandemic.

The Freedom of expression organization ARTICLE 19 in May 2020 in its report, Ensuring the Public’s Right to Know in the COVID-19 Pandemic, has highlighted several threats to governments' obligations on access to information and public health under human rights law. These include:

- Governments trying to limit criticism of poor decision-making or as a larger effort to restrict human rights or hide corruption
- Emergency legislation that limits access to information about the pandemic and/or extends the deadlines by which governments have to respond
- Public access to information not being prioritised while public services are reduced.

On 16 March 2020, the Presidential Communications Operations Office (PCCO), the agency tasked to implement the Freedom on Information (FOI) program of the government, issued Advisory No. 01 s. 2020 which suspends the period to respond to all FOI request due to COVID-19. The advisory not only suspends the time to respond to the request of the public but also limits the access to information regarding governance information including legal and regulatory measures to address the COVID-19 pandemic and data, analyses, and reports on the current and estimated economic impacts and government measures to mitigate the impact of pandemic, among others. To prevent this from happening in the future public health crisis or emergencies, this proposed measure ensures continuity of government transactions and services even in unprecedented times of crises such COVID-19 pandemic, calamities, other public health emergencies, civil unrest and other emergency or crisis situation by mandating all public documents be made available in digital format so that government officials and employees working remotely shall continue to serve the Filipino people.

For the effective implementation of FOI program and all other FOI programs or initiatives in the government, this bill mandates the Philippine Communications Operations Office (PCCO) to be the lead agency in implementing the provisions of the proposed legislative measure.

This bill would significantly help our government better serve the needs of the people. The passage of the FOI bill will signal the beginning of the realization of our quest for good governance, transparency and accountability. Filipinos look forward to the day when an open and accountable government serves them, their interests and common aspirations.

Approval of this measure is therefore earnestly requested.

Failure of the government agency to decide within the aforesaid period shall constitute denial of the appeal.

ii. Upon denial of the appeal with the government agency, the requesting party may file a verified petition for mandamus in the proper court, alleging the facts with certainty and praying that judgment be rendered ordering the respondent, immediately or at some other time to be specified by the court, to disclose the requested information.
