AN ACT
INSTITUTING THE MAGNA CARTA OF FILIPINO SEAFARERS

EXPLANATORY NOTE

Article XIII, Section 3 of the 1987 Philippine Constitution provides that the State shall afford full protection to labor, local, and overseas. One category of these overseas workers are the seafarers whose numbers have steadily increased throughout the years.

In fact, the Philippines is known to be one of the largest supplier of seafarers in the world,¹ and the seafarers’ contribution to the Philippine economy is undeniable with their remittances. According to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas (BSP), Filipino seafarers have remitted over USD6.53 billion in 2019² alone. Despite their significant contributions, however, they are often overshadowed by the country’s land-based overseas workers.

In addition, the country’s current laws protecting migrant workers, particularly Republic Act No. 8042, as amended, also known as the Overseas Filipinos and Migrant Workers Act, do not adequately address the needs of seafarers, especially considering the peculiar circumstances that they are facing while working aboard ocean-going ships. For example, Filipino seafarers face the risk of abuse, exploitation and contract violations by their employers in the open seas with limited access to welfare services from Philippine embassies abroad.

Thus, there is a need to prioritize and promote the welfare and the protection of the rights of Filipino seafarers. This bill, among others, seeks to establish the rights of seafarers; enumerate the duties of employers, seafarers and government agencies; and setting minimum standards for the training, accommodation, work facilities, education, repatriation, occupational safety and health of seafarers.

This bill also mandates the Philippine Overseas Employment Administration and the Maritime Industry Authority to maintain a registry of seafarers. On the other hand, the Department of Labor and Employment is mandated to formulate the Maritime Occupational Safety and Health Standards (MOSHS) pursuant to the provisions of Republic Act No. 11058, otherwise known as the “Occupational Safety and Health Law” and pertinent maritime conventions and treaties ratified by the Philippines.

During the celebration of the 2020 Day of the Seafarers in June, the International Maritime Organization (IMO) called on the Member States “to recognize seafarers as key workers – and to provide them with the support, assistance and travel options open to all key workers during the pandemic.”

This bill is an answer to IMO’s call.

In view of the foregoing, the immediate approval of this bill is highly recommended.
