DEFINING THE CRIME OF SEXUAL ABUSE OR EXPLOITATION OF CHILDREN, PRESCRIBING PENALTIES THEREFOR, AMENDING FOR THE PURPOSE
REPUBLIC ACT NO. 9775, OTHERWISE KNOWN AS THE ANTI-CHILD
PORNOGRAPHY ACT OF 2009, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES

EXPLANATORY NOTE

This bill seeks to amend Republic Act 9775, otherwise known as the “Anti-Child Pornography Act of 2009”.

More than ten (10) years after the passage of RA 9775, child pornography materials continue to abound particularly in the internet. The term “pornography” has been recently referred to in most international conventions and regulations as “sexual abuse and exploitation”. This gives the term a broader scope and allows a wider latitude for law enforcement authorities to work on in prosecuting perpetrators of this inhuman act.

With Filipinos consecutively topping the world in terms of social media use, there is a lot of room for abusers to engage in sexual exploitation of children behind closed doors and in front of a webcam. The Philippines has been dubbed by the United Nations Children’s Fund (UNICEF) the “global epicenter of the live-stream sexual abuse trade.” One in 5 Filipino children are vulnerable to online sexual exploitation. UNICEF even tagged the country as the top global source of child pornography in 2017.¹

The Department of Justice (DOJ) Office of Cybercrime received at least 600,000 cybertips of sexual images of Filipino children in 2018. This is more than a 1,000% increase from the previous 45,645 in 2017. Officials from the DOJ and the Philippine National Police (PNP) reported continuous training of their front liners for prosecuting the evolving crime. But why are so many children in the Philippines still in danger of being sexually exploited online?²

The National Center for Missing & Exploited Children (NCMEC) conducted a survey of online sexual exploitation of children (OSEC) cases investigated by some of the law enforcement agencies engaged in the Virtual Global Taskforce (VGT), and the case files of OSEC cases originating in the Philippines that have been referred to or investigated by Philippine law enforcement agencies. In its report, it highlighted growth over time in the use of Philippine IP addresses for internet-based child sexual exploitation.³

The International Justice Mission (IJM) in its recent study entitled, Online Sexual Exploitation of Children in the Philippines: Analysis and Recommendations for Governments, Industry and Civil Society, had four key findings which include:

¹ https://rappler.com/newsbreak/lg/things-to-know-online-sexual-exploitation-children-philippines
² Ibid.
1. There was a consistent, sharp rise in the number of IP addresses linked to the Philippines between 2014 and 2017.

2. The estimated number/prevalence rate of IP addresses used for CSE each month grew more than 12-fold between 2014 and 2017.

3. The estimated number/prevalence rate of IP addresses used for CSE each year more than doubled between 2014 and 2017.

4. Due to inconsistencies in the quality of the data within the open-ended text fields in CyberTipline reports, it was not possible to estimate the percent of internet based CSE that is suspected to be OSEC.4

The in-depth casefile review in the said study provided information on how Philippine OSEC cases were initiated, typologies of OSEC victims, customers, and traffickers, as well as information on the offending process. Twelve key findings were identified from this data:

1. The majority (64%) of Philippine OSEC cases were initiated by referrals from international law enforcement agencies.

2. The annual number of cases referred to and/or investigated by Philippine anti-trafficking units increased sharply and consistently from 2014 (1 case) to 2017 (43 cases).

3. The characteristics of OSEC victims were distinct from those of victims of establishment-based commercial sexual exploitation of children.

4. OSEC was usually a family-based crime.

5. Without intervention, the abuse usually lasted for years.

6. Customers tended to be older men.

7. Customers tended to be from Western countries, although many had travelled to or lived in the Philippines at some point in time.

8. There was an average of two traffickers per case.

9. Traffickers tended to be younger Filipina women, often family members of the victims.

10. Most criminals who got caught communicated in English.

11. The crime occurred on the surface of the internet.

12. There appears to be a financial motivation to the crime for most facilitators of OSEC.

Data on global law enforcement OSEC cases that had been referred from one country to another and NCMEC data on CyberTipline reports that were classified as involving incidents of “online enticement” were examined to understand the Philippines within a global context. Two key findings were identified from this data:

1. According to global law enforcement data, the Philippines was the largest known source of OSEC cases.

2. The Asia/Pacific region was the third largest source of “online enticement” CyberTipline reports.

Overall, the data from all three parts of this study suggest that OSEC is a serious and growing problem in the Philippines, perpetrated by a unique type of offender and affecting very young children. Due to the lack of quality data that exists on OSEC and complexity of the crime, this experimental study should be used as a catalyst for the global stakeholder community to continue prioritizing and improving data collection and analysis so we can collectively understand and effectively address this crime, as well as the impact of our interventions.⁵

In this light, immediate passage of this bill is earnestly sought.
