PLENARY PROCEEDINGS OF THE 17th CONGRESS, THIRD REGULAR SESSION

House of Representatives

Vol. 1

Monday, July 23, 2018

No. 1

OPENING OF THE THIRD REGULAR SESSION

CALL TO ORDER

At 10:04 a.m., Speaker Pantaleon D. Alvarez called the session to order.

THE SPEAKER. Honorable Members of the House of Representatives, today is the fourth Monday of July 2018.

The Constitution mandates that Congress convene once every year on the fourth Monday of July to commence its regular session. I hereby call the Third Regular Session of the Seventeenth Congress to order.

NATIONAL ANTHEM AND INVOCATION

THE SPEAKER. Please rise for the singing of the Philippine National Anthem and The Lord's Prayer to be led by the Tagum City Chamber Chorale.

The Tagum City Chamber Chorale led the Philippine National Anthem and thereafter sang The Lord's Prayer.

REMARKS OF THE SPEAKER

THE SPEAKER. The Chair would like to address this august Chamber. Please take your seats.

My dearest colleagues, fellow Representatives of the people, distinguished guests, our friends from the media, ladies and gentlemen, good morning.

There is this old story shared to me some years ago and I would like to share it with you today.

There was a person who would be born in the Philippines and the Creator told him, "You may shape the society you shall be born into." The person looked at the Philippines, saw the poverty and despair spread throughout the land especially outside the National Capital Region. Given what he saw, the person became cynical. Understandably, no one wants to be poor and destitute. That is why the person chose a family he would be born into and, using the power given to him by the Creator, concentrated the social advantages and opportunities on that family. Thus, the person would have a nice home, plenty of food to eat and a comfortable life ahead.

The Creator then checked up on the person and asked him, "Are you ready?" The person replied, "Yes, and I have also chosen the family I shall be part of and made beneficial arrangements." The Creator was taken aback and said, "Wait a minute. You do not get to choose which family you will be born into." The person was shocked and disappointed given the uncertainty he suddenly had to confront. What if he were born into a poor and underprivileged family? He would hardly get a shot at a good and dignified life. The person, therefore, asked the Creator for more time. Out of kindness, the Creator accommodated his request. Rather than concentrate on opportunities in the hands of a few, the person dismantled his previous design. Instead, he broadened and spread opportunities beyond Manila and made them accessible to all Filipinos. By doing so, regardless of where or to which family the person would be born into, he had a fair fighting chance at opportunities and the rewards that came with hard work during his life here on earth.

This story shared to me many years ago has stayed in my memory. I will never forget the lessons it imparts especially this one: at the end of the day, bilog ang mundo at lahat tayo, no exception, mayaman man o mahirap, makapangyarihan man o dukha, ay kasama sa ikot ng kapalaran.

My colleagues in the House of Representatives, we were elected by the Filipino people, all of whom had no say as to which parents and family we would be born into. Unfortunately, here in the Philippines, this genetic lottery significantly shapes the destiny of our people. That is why, it is our duty as their Representatives to do what the person did when he was confronted and humbled by the uncertainty that comes with being underprivileged. We have to level the playing field and maximize as well as spread opportunities for all. This is the governing spirit behind what we have accomplished in this Chamber for the past two years.

From July 2016 and as of today, we have processed 2,929 legislative measures and enacted 133 bills that are now laws of the land. During the Second Regular Session alone, the President signed 128 bills into law.

Our record is as follows:

In the field of education, as an investment in our youth, we created 13 additional public schools. We also increased the budget of the Department of Education by P10 billion and made access to tertiary education in state universities and colleges universal.

To protect our youth from the dangerous risks of joining societies and organizations, we strengthened the Anti-Hazing Act.

We also enacted the Mental Health Act which provides our people, especially students, with additional assistance in dealing with mental health concerns, sound body and sound mind.

We also worked hard to improve the standards of education and training through the Philippine Qualifications Framework Act which aligns domestic qualifications with international standards. Filipinos now have a better chance at competing with the best and brightest the world has to offer.

Beyond education, let us talk about jobs. Without business, there will be no private sector jobs, and that is why we made it easier to do business in the Philippines through the Ease of Doing Business Act. To supplement this initiative, access to capital through formal financial institutions rather than onerous five-six arrangements is necessary. We have enacted the Financial Inclusion Act, transmitted the same to the President; and should he find it worthy of his signature, it will soon be a law of the land. While businesses are important, we must be mindful that businesses, when left unchecked, may exploit instead of help and uplift their employees. To address this, we strengthened compliance with occupational and health standards in the workplace. We have also passed on Third and final Reading a Bill which strengthens the security of tenure of workers.

We look forward to working hand in hand with our counterparts in the Senate for this Bill to hurdle the legislative process. It would not make sense for Filipinos to educate themselves, work hard and not taste the fruits of their labor; hence, we reformed the Tax Code which led to an increase in the take-home pay of Filipino taxpayers.

There are, of course, inflationary concerns. These, however, are short-term hiccups and are vastly outweighed by the overall long-term benefits that our country will reap with this historic reform.

Looking into the future, to sustain the gains we now enjoy, we have to invest in science and technology. Who better to help us in this other than Filipino scientists scattered across the world? Hopefully, we give them additional reason to come back home through the Balik Scientist Act.

Another top priority necessary for the orderly function of society is peace and order. As we meet here today, our military and uniformed personnel are manning garrisons to keep the Filipino people safe from harm. We have fulfilled our promise to raise their salaries as reward for their hard work. This also serves as a deterrent against the temptation to engage in corruption due to the desperation that comes along with poverty.

My colleagues, as you see, the Seventeenth Congress and this administration worked hard to spread opportunities to all by hitting key strategic areas for growth and development, education, health, labor and employment, business, finance, tax, science and technology, peace and order, and professionalism, by curbing corruption in the ranks of those who protect us. These legislative accomplishments have no precedent in the history of the Philippine Congress but we are not done yet.

Through an arduous bicameral Conference Committee, we have finally finished the Bangsamoro Organic Law. (Applause) It will be presented to the President for his consideration. That piece of legislative document is a giant leap toward the promise of peace and prosperity, both of which have long eluded the island and the people of Mindanao.

All of these could not have been possible had it not been for the hard-working Congressmen, the House leadership, our colleagues in the Senate, and Committee Chairpersons, their members, and the Secretariat staff and of course with the special mention of our very hard-working and intelligent Majority Leader Rep. Rodolfo “Rudy” C. Fariñas. (Applause)

I would want to personally thank you right now, one by one for all your efforts. However, time constraints do not allow me to do so. Nonetheless, please know that I am grateful and proud of the work you have done.

Looking back at what we have accomplished, I do hope that the person I told you about, the one who will be born in the Philippines will be less apprehensive and fearful. After all, he has seen that the Congress of the Filipino people, though far from perfect, has tried its best to broaden and spread access to opportunities for all. But, admittedly, there is still much work to be done as we start the Third Regular Session and this involves dismantling one of the most extractive institutions that has robbed the rest of the Philippines with the exception of a few cities of its chance to fully realize its potential for growth and development. I am talking about the 1987 Constitution.

The primary reason why many critics claim there is no need for Charter change is that the problems of the Philippines should be blamed at bad people running the government. They posit that people are the center of the problem and charters are inconsequential. Hence, there is no need to change the Constitution. This position is untenable.

Experts from the field of economics, political science, developmental studies, both here and abroad, have a consensus about what is necessary to cure an ailing nation and they have pinpointed the fundamental issue that must be addressed. If, for business, it is about location, location, and location; if for banks, it is about capital, capital, capital; when it comes to development of nations, it boils down to institutions, institutions, and institutions. And what is the mother of all institutions here in the Philippines? It is the 1987 Constitution.

We gave it a head start of 30 years. Has it successfully produced a virtuous cycle that led to prosperity and opportunity for all? Or has it proven itself to be an extractive institution that benefits some at the expense of the many? Yes, bad people are also responsible for the mess that we are presently in. But to miss the bigger picture and fail to understand the role that institutions play in the puzzle of prosperity and development, for our nation will seal our fate and preserve mediocrity as status quo, we have to do something about this.

There are many drafts proposing changes to our Charter. The three most prominent ones are as follows: First is the draft of our Committee on Constitutional Amendments; second is the draft of the PDP Laban Federalism Institute; and finally, third, is the draft of the Consultative Committee led by retired Chief Justice Reynato S. Puno.

The topics covered by said proposals are numerous as they try to address the deficiencies and flaws of the 1987 Constitution. These are too many to mention as we speak to you now, but these will be further discussed in the committees and meetings. Nonetheless, a very important issue raised in the drafts must be especially and specifically mentioned in the issue involving political dynasties.

I have manifested and made public that I am amenable to the anti-political dynasty provision as proposed in the Consultative Committee draft. However, I have also made it clear, based on my personal studies and consultation with peers that political dynasties proliferated because of the unintended effects of imposing term limits. Let us push for the self-executory, anti-political dynasty provision para rin wala ng pipilitin sa pamilyang tumakbo kahit ayaw naman talaga. But I propose that term limits be removed.

If we succeed, and I am confident we will succeed, the difficult reforms we intend to accomplish—and I am sure that the person I told you about, the guy who had no say as to where and to which family he will be born into—rather than worry about being born in the Philippines, he will just smile and say, “It is okay, I can be born anywhere in the archipelago. It does not matter which family I shall be as a child because opportunities are vastly spread to the point that hard work will have its rewards and privilege would not matter much anymore.”

This is the Filipino dream. Together, let us realize it.

Thank you, good morning, and may God bless the Philippines. (Applause)

ROLL CALL

THE SPEAKER. The Secretary General will now call the roll of Members of the House of Representatives elected from legislative districts apportioned among the provinces, cities and municipalities, metropolitan area, and party-list organizations.
